Barbar Temples:

The Barbar Temples: without special title H. Hellmuth Andersen, Flemming Højlund, 2003      The Barbar Temples H. Hellmuth Andersen, Flemming Højlund, Carlsberg Foundation's Gulf Project, 2003 This book provides a detailed description of the three ancient temples unearthed between 1954-1961 near Barbar on the northern part of Bahrain island in the Persian Gulf. Two of the structures from the centuries around 2000 BC reveal traditions going back to Sumerian temples. A number of spectacular objects were found here including cylindrical alabaster jars, a human-shaped copper mirror handle and the most famous object from the Barbar Temples, a bull's head of copper. Structurally, a chamber was found over a freshwater spring indicating the presence of a water cult and perhaps forging a connection to Enki, the Mesopotamian god of the subterranean freshwater ocean, apsu. The temple apsu is well known from cuneiform sources but has been extremely difficult to identify in Mesopotamian excavations. The Barbar well chamber may be such an apsu as the authors point out among their highly detailed descriptions and analysis of the finds. In two volumes      The Barbar Temples H. Hellmuth Andersen, Flemming Højlund, 2003      The Archaeology of the Arabian Gulf Michael Rice, 2002-03-11 The archaeological remains in the Gulf area are astounding and still relatively unexplored. Michael Rice has produced the first up-to-date book which encompasses all the recent work in the area. He shows that the Gulf has been a major channel of commerce for millennia and that its ancient culture was rich and complex to be counted with its great contemporaries in Sumer, Egypt and south-west Persia      Life and Land Use on the Bahrain Islands Curtis E. Larsen, 1983 According to archaeological and historical records, the Bahrain Islands of the Arabian Gulf were the home of a flourishing civilization four thousand years ago. Then as now, these islands served as an important locus of maritime trade but they were also characterized as a land of copious artesian springs and fertile fields. Modern Bahrain, in contrast, is beset by environmental and demographic problems: the depletion of the artesian water supply, abandonment of rural agricultural lands and rapid population growth. In this exemplary interdisciplinary study, Curtis E. Larsen combines archaeological, geological, historical and anthropological methods to reconstruct the paleoenvironmental and socioeconomic context that links Bahrain's present to its past      Bahrain Through The Ages - the Archaeology Shaikha Haya Ali Al Khalifa, Michael Rice, 2012-11-12 Introduction Shoreline changes in Bahrain since the beginning of human occupation. Variation in Holocene land use patterns on the Bahrain Islands. Construction of a land use model. The human biological history of the Early Bronze Age population in Bahrain.
