

Borderline Patients' Symptoms Studied At Baseline and Follow-Up

Researchers assessed the borderline psychopathology of 362 patients with personality disorders using two semi-structured interviews (see article above). Below are the 24 symptoms that were studied at baseline and follow-up. Of the 24 symptoms studied, patients showed patterns of sharp decline over time on the 12 acute symptom types, and at the 10-year follow-up, they were reported by less than 15 percent of the patients who had reported them at baseline. The remaining 12 symptoms showed patterns of substantial but less dramatic decline over the follow-up period.
