

THE RISK OF A RISKY BUSINESS: How the new EPA rule on hazardous waste could affect your company's bottom line

By Robert J. Lippert, Esq., and Robert J. Lippert, Esq., is a partner in the law firm of Lippert, Lippert & Lippert, P.C., located in St. Louis, Missouri. He is also a frequent speaker at seminars on hazardous waste management and environmental regulation.

As the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) continues to refine its hazardous waste management regulations, companies that handle hazardous waste must stay abreast of the latest developments. The new rule on hazardous waste management, which was published in the Federal Register on October 1, 1991, is a significant update to the existing regulations. It addresses the management of hazardous waste from the point of generation to the point of disposal. The rule is designed to protect human health and the environment by ensuring that hazardous waste is managed in a safe and sound manner. The rule applies to all companies that handle hazardous waste, regardless of the size of the company. The rule is a complex one, and it is important for companies to understand the requirements of the rule and to ensure that they are in compliance with the rule. The rule is a significant update to the existing regulations, and it is important for companies to stay abreast of the latest developments in the field of hazardous waste management.
