IMPROVE YOUR ACTIVE LISTENING SKILLS

If you're talking face to face, you need to develop active listening skills to best handle conflict. Effective communication leans heavily on listening skills, which reinforces a two-way understanding between two or more people. How exactly do you actively listen? If you remember these 3 steps, you're on the right track.

Maintain eye contact 50% of the time while talking, and 70% of the time while listening.”

-Michigan State University

Maintain open body language as discussed in the statistic above, and in addition focus on steady, but non-aggres- sive, eye contact.

60% of communication is portrayed by facial expressions.”

-Psychology Today

Pay attention to the tone of voice and the body language of your conversation partner.

Note their body language and tone of voice, as well as their words, but don't get distracted by them. Nonverbal communication is still telling you something — pay attention and adapt.

Don't plan what you're going to say while the other person is speaking. Take time to truly listen, rather than plan your rebuttal.

Humans generally listen at a 25% comprehension rate.”

-Forbes

Active listening involves asking questions to clarify or confirm as needed. You need to ensure the person you're talking to feels heard.

The best way to do this is to reframe one of their points as a question. Don't do this frequently, as it can come across as a "gotcha!" moment.
Clarify confusion as it comes up to avoid future conflict.
