Avian Embryology:

Avian Embryology ,2011-09-21 This revised edition will continue to serve as the most complete and up to date guide to the use of the avian embryo in studies of vertebrate development It will include new approaches to analysis of the chick genome gene knock out studies using RNA interference morpholinos and other cutting edge techniques As with the original edition emphasis has been placed on providing practical guidance highlighting potentials and pitfalls of all key cell biological and embryological techniques Fully revised second edition Organized into basic and advanced Methods New section on Functional Genomics Methods in Avian Embryology ,1996-05-16 A current and authoritative guide Methods in Avian Embryology presents a combination of classical embryological techniques and modern molecular biological approaches to studying the developing avian embryo The only one of its kind this book is specifically devoted to providing a detailed approach to studying avian embryos It also describes how to use this system to study problems in cell developmental and neurobiology The protocols emphasize microsurgery histology and cellular and molecular marking which are not covered in the usual molecular biology methods manuals The methods include embryonic transplantations cell culture and organ culture in situ hybridization classical histological techniques and retrovirally mediated gene transfer Key Features Complete and easy to follow procedures Helpful illustrations Distinguished group of authors Wide range of approaches Molecular Embryology Paul T. Sharpe,Ivor Mason,2008-02-02 Most people have some interest in embryos this probably results in part from their interest in understanding the biological origins of themselves and their offspring and increasingly concerns about how environmental change such as pollution might affect human development Obviously ethical considerations preclude experimental studies of human embryos and consequently the developmental biologist has turned to other species to examine this process Fortunately the most significant conclusion to be drawn from the experimental embryology of the last two decades is the manner in which orthologous or closely related molecules are deployed to mediate similar developmental processes in both vertebrates and invertebrates The molecular mechanisms regulating processes fundamental to most animals such as axial patterning or axon guidance are frequently conserved during evolution It is now widely believed that the differences between phyla and classes are the result of new genes arising mostly by duplication and divergence of extant sequences regulating the appearance of derived characters Other vertebrates are obviously most likely to use the same developmental mechanisms as humans and within the vertebrate subphylum the parent degree of conservation of developmental mechanism is considerable It has long been recognized that particular vertebrate species offer either distinct advantages in investigating particular stages of development or are peculiarly amenable to particular manipulations No single animal can provide all the answers because not all types of experiments can be carried out on a single species Developments of the Avian Embryo Freeman,2012-12-06 In this book we have described the major events of embryonic development and considered the underlying mechanisms which result in the production of a viable hatchling We have as the subtitle of the book indicates concentrated on behavioural and physiological topics it is not our purpose to consider the early embryology of the bird which is adequately covered by other texts but we have included morphogenetic information where appropriate The form of the book was dictated by a belief that interest in this aspect of development is not confined to embryologists biochemists and physiologists Therefore after describing the conditions in which the egg normally develops we have considered first the whole embryo what it is like at different stages what it does how it gets from one position to another within the shell and how later it comes to interact with the wider environment of the nest Only after this have we considered the development of the nervous and sensory mechanisms on which this transformation depends and on the problem of the level of behavioural maturity with which the chick emerges from the egg With the main lines of development described we have in the second part of the book turned to a detailed consideration of the physiology of development ranging from what may be conveniently described as the life support systems gaseous exchange provision of energy etc to the of hormones in avian development
