• Advantages of the in vitro model are that it is simpler and less expensive than the in vivo model, and that it allows for a more detailed study of the mechanisms of action of the drug. However, the in vitro model is limited by the fact that it does not take into account the complex interactions between the drug and the body, such as the effects of metabolism, excretion, and distribution. Therefore, the in vitro model is best used as a preliminary screening tool, and the in vivo model is used for more detailed studies.
