

THE BROCK BIBLIOGRAPHY OF PUBLISHED CANADIAN PLAYS IN ENGLISH, 1766-1978. Edited by Anton Wagner. Toronto: Playwrights Press, 1980.

The great boom of Canadian playwriting in the seventies has finally overcome the amateur dramatics image of native Canadian theatre.

'The Pump and the Tavern', an 1874 pro-temperance sketch is still listed in the new 'Brock Bibliography', as are forty-five plays by Sister Mary Agnes (evidently dramatist-in-residence at St Mary's Academy, Winnipeg, for life). Yet, the healthy fringe movement of the last decade in Toronto and Vancouver, and the recent tendency for English-Canadians to translate and adapt the most successful work coming out of Montreal has not only transformed Canadian theatre, but has rendered the original 1972 'Brock Bibliography' totally obsolescent.

This is an exhaustive, uncritical compilation of every Canadian play published in English the twelve Brock University researchers could find. Sister Mary Agnes' play for twenty-six girls and one female (!) written to teach the meaning of 'true Christian charity' has not lost its place, but works by such current luminaries in English Canada's professional theatre as David Fennario, Ken Mitchell and George Walker help to redress the balance.

David Freeman and David French are there, too. Considered the most promising writers of the early seventies, it is alarming to note that they have not produced anything since.

Michel Tremblay, now more popular in translation than he is in Quebec, is well-represented, though there is no mention of the important nineteenth century French-Canadian playwright, Louis-H. Fréchette. Presumably (incredibly!) his work has never been translated into English.

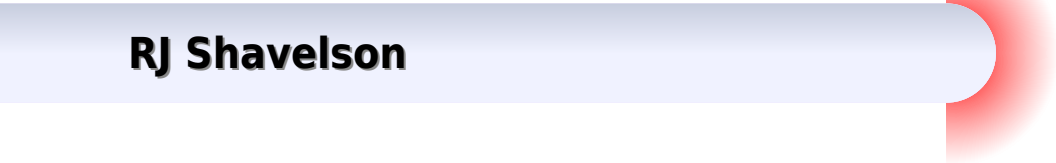

Playwrights are listed in alphabetical order, by century, and each play is given a consecutive number for easy reference. For instance, Irving Layton and Leonard Cohen are jointly responsible for entry D1160 (cross-referenced as D393 under 'Cohen') entitled 'A Man Was Killed', which we are told appeared in Canadian Theatre Review, number 14, in the Spring of 1977. It has six scenes, requires a cast of eight and is described as 'an absurdist comedy set in Montreal in which a former professor and Mafia figures prepare to shoot pedestrians on the street'. Sounds like great fun but it was undoubtedly just a literary exercise by the two premier poets. If it had actually been produced, the theatre company, venue and date of first performance would have been listed.

The 'Brock Bibliography' is concise and attractively laid out. It is not exclusively for academics. By now I would hope there would be a well-thumbed copy to be found in every Canadian provincial rep.
