Bruce Beckons:

The Bruce Beckons William S. Fox, 2002-12-15 First published in 1952 The Bruce Beckons was immediately acclaimed as a delightful guide to a uniquely beautiful and fascinating part of Ontario Separating Georgian Bay from Lake Huron the Bruce Peninsula's remarkable natural history and richly varied wildlife today continue to draw thousands of visitors every year W Sherwood Fox a distinguished scholar who was for twenty years president of the University of Western Ontario knew and loved the Bruce's history and its folklore throughout his life During his retirement he served several years as honorary president of the Federation of Ontario Naturalists

When We Both Got to Heaven Mel Atkey, 2002-10-08 When We Both Got to Heaven places James Atkey 1805-1868 on the shores of Georgian Bay at the time of treaty negotiations between the First Nations people of the Saugeen Nawash and Colpoy's Bay areas and the Colonial government A Methodist lay preacher Atkey leaves the Isle of Wight and arrives at Colpoy's Bay with his family in 1855 There he takes up the position of teacher for the Anishnaabe children of the area The great great great grandson of James Atkey author Mel Atkey engaged in extensive research of both primary and secondary sources His efforts provide considerable insight into both the influence of Wesleyan Methodism of the time and the background context of the treaty negotiations that ultimately led to the surrender of much of the Saugeen Peninsula for pioneer settlement People with leadership roles of the past such as Chief Kegedonce Kahkewaquonaby Rev Peter Jones Laurence Oliphant and Sir Francis Bond Head as well as many others are part of Atkey's story Reverend Maggie McLeod of the Cape Croker United Church provides a thoughtful Foreword This quite remarkable book is a compelling read for those interested in Ontario history First Nations history genealogy and the role of religion at the time of European settlement

The University as Publisher Eleanor Harman, 1961-12-15 It is doubtless inevitable that a publishing house should celebrate an important anniversary by publishing a book It is perhaps equally inevitable that such a book should include a description of the founding and growth of the house concerned However it is hoped that The University as Publisher will serve a much more useful purpose than merely to mark the Diamond Anniversary of the University of Toronto Press Toronto now has two sister presses and will we trust soon greet several more This volume may therefore be of interest to those institutions contemplating the founding of such scholarly publishing departments It may also help to explain to some of those directly concerned with the founding of such presses and to the general public what university press publishing is about Then too comparatively little has been issued about publishing in Canada and very little indeed about scholarly publishing in this country This volume may therefore make a modest contribution to the economic and cultural history of the last sixty years in Canada It is hoped further that this account of one of the departments of the University of Toronto may be of interest to its faculty and alumni of today and useful to its historians of tomorrow

Cities in the Suburbs Humphrey Carver, 1962-12-15 We are all familiar with the almost ritual lament about the desolation and sameness of the suburbs that surround our modern cities Is this complaint inevitable or can something be done to lend variety colour and meaning to these spreading areas In a book full of good questions and apt illustrations Mr Carver examines what has provided a sense of community for city groupings of the past and how leading planners of our day Ebenezer Howard Frank Lloyd Wright have suggested it be found for modern cities His own proposal for achieving this goal is a very simple one and originates in the earlier views of a city as a place in which an urban society achieves its individual character by congregating around its own social institutions Somehow today we have to recover this simple idea about a city and apply it to the contemporary sprawling urban region The exposing metropolis is a good descriptive term for the modern city with its social institutions removed from the original centre and scattered into the suburbs Now we should try to rearrange suburban growth so that each new community can grow up around its own vigorous and attractive Town Centre a place that can command the interest and pride of those who live immediately around it These small cities in our suburbs would not just be dormitories for their central core city but rather communities in their own right and the new kind of town centre would give a focus for their social political and cultural life The idea of metropolitan or regional government for large urban areas has been much debated in Canada But there has not been a clear view of how such governments could give birth to new daughter communities around them The establishment of new Town Centres in growing suburban areas would be a workable method of helping these new settlements through a period of growth Housing and commercial developments would then be able to gather in an organized fashion around the focal point in a regional plan It is hoped this suggestion will be taken up by local politicians and their professional staffs but they cannot steer towards long term objectives of this kind unless the general public understands the general philosophy involved This is a lively book hopeful in its suggestions and cheerful in its phrasing and it should provoke eager discussion It is illustrated with unusual line drawings to point up the argument and with many photographs
