

Global Perspectives Timeline

About the Timeline

The first half of the timeline covers the period of 1000 B.C. to A.D. 1500 as movements of both people and goods with centers that provide from 1000 B.C. to the present as movements of the people. The timeline synthesizes the events located in the text and presents them in a graphic format that synthesizes geography and the chronological movement of people in different parts of the world. This format allows the student to more clearly see history as a globally occurring and continuous process.

The timeline is separated into three areas that represent large areas of the globe. The color coding for the globe corresponds to specific regions within each area. The color coding presents a visual path for viewing the history of the globe right of the world. The three areas allow students to see events that are happening around the globe and understand events that occur globally and affect all three parts of the timeline.

Timeline Strategies

The Global Perspectives Timeline can be a powerful tool in teaching various aspects of world and global perspectives in the context of world history. One way of the following strategies to help utilize this tool is:

- Provide students a series of questions when introducing a chapter. Before reading a new chapter, discuss studying questions in the timeline and point out what was happening in other regions of the world at the same time.
- Use the timeline as a discussion starter. Ask students questions such as, "What was happening in Europe while the Aztec empire was peaking in Central America?" or "What occurred a longer period of time than the last glacial period in the United States or the Middle East?"
- Encourage students to discuss with the group. Have them make notes for more meaningful things they learned in a particular area. Have them identify where they were, should be played in the timeline.
- Use the timeline as a springboard for research. Ask students to identify a timeline entry that catches their interest, perhaps in the largest region, the smallest region, or the one with the most unusual name. Have them identify research and report on that entry of their choice.
