

ANTH 1003 study guide

Modules 1-2

- Anthropology:
 - The study of human nature, human society, and the human past
- Applied anthropology:
 - Subfield of anthropology in which anthropologists use information gathered from the other anthropological specialties to solve practical cross-cultural problems.
- Archaeology:
 - A cultural anthropology of the human past involving analysis of material remains left behind by earlier societies
- Biocultural anthropology:
 - The specialty of anthropology that shows how variation in the beliefs and behaviors of members of different human groups is shaped by sets of learned behaviors and ideas that human beings acquire as members of society—that is, by culture
- Biological anthropology:
 - The specialty of anthropology that looks at human beings as biological organisms and tries to discover what characteristics make them different from other organisms and what characteristics they share
- Comparison:
 - A characteristic of the anthropological perspective that requires anthropologists to consider similarities and differences in as wide a range of human societies as possible before generalizing about human nature, human society, or the human past
- Evolution:
 - A characteristic of the anthropological perspective that requires anthropologists to place their observations about human nature, human society, or the human past in a temporal framework that takes into consideration change over time
- Fieldwork:
 - An extended period of close involvement with the people in whose language or way of life anthropologists are interested, during which anthropologists ordinarily collect most of their data
- Holism:
 - A characteristic of the anthropological perspective that describes, at the highest and most inclusive level, how anthropology tries to integrate all that is known about human beings and their activities
- Informants:
 - People in a particular culture who work with anthropologists and provide them with insights about their way of life
 - Also called respondents, teachers, or friends
- Material culture:
 - Objects created or shaped by human beings and given meaning by cultural practices
- Medical anthropology:
 - The specialty of anthropology that concerns itself with human health—the factors that contribute to disease or illness and the ways that human populations deal with disease or illness
