Between Worlds Early Exchanges Between Maori And Europeans 1773 1815:

Between Worlds Anne Salmond, 1997 Anne Salmond's trail blazing and award winning book Two Worlds rewrote our understanding of what happened between Maori and European from Abel Tasman's visit in 1642 to Cook's in 1772. This book picks up where Two Worlds ended with the arrival of Cook's second expedition in 1773 and takes the story through to 1815 with the establishment of the first British missionary settlement in the Bay of Islands. Between the Worlds describes Cook's second and third voyages. It tells of a time when white people first lived on the shores of New Zealand often joining Maori communities the first so called Pakeha Maori. The story also covers the early visits of the missionaries Marsden and Kendall. At the same time young Maori men went to sea in European ships and explored the world. Like Two Worlds before it Between Worlds redefines our understanding of the earliest days of Maori and European interaction and forces us to rethink New Zealand's shared history.

Between Worlds Anne Salmond, 2018-02-26 Vivid convincing and utterly memorable Michael King North South Anne Salmond's extraordinary Between Worlds begins with the arrival of Cook's second expedition in 1773 and takes the story through to 1815 with the establishment of the first British missionary settlement in the Bay of Islands. It describes Cook's second and third voyages telling of a time when white settlers first lived on the shores of New Zealand often joining Maori communities the first so called Pakeha Maori. These Maori communities were working out their own strategies for dealing with the strangers in their midst. New ways of living began to emerge between Maori and European. Between Worlds redefines our understanding of the earliest days of Maori and European interaction and forces us to rethink New Zealand's shared history. There is perhaps no scholar working in Oceania better equipped in knowledge skills and sentiment to write of between worlds so history. That I think is the supreme grace of Anne Salmond's work. Empire and the Making of Native Title Bain Attwood, 2020-07-16 This book provides a new approach to the historical treatment of indigenous peoples' sovereignty and property rights in Australia and New Zealand. By shifting attention from the original European claims of possession to a comparison of the ways in which British players treated these matters later Bain Attwood not only reveals some startling similarities between the Australian and New Zealand cases but revises the long held explanations of the differences He argues that the treatment of the sovereignty and property rights of First Nations was seldom determined by the workings of moral principle legal doctrine political thought or government policy Instead it was the highly particular historical circumstances in which the first encounters between natives and Europeans occurred and colonisation began that largely dictated whether treaties of cession were negotiated just as a bitter political struggle determined the significance of the Treaty of Waitangi and ensured that native title was made in New Zealand

Racial Crossings Damon Ieremia Salesa,2011-05-19 Moving away from conventional theories about Victorian attitudes towards race Salesa focuses on an array of equally influential yet seemingly opposite ideas where racial crossing was seen as a means of improvement a way to manage racial conflict or create new societies or even a way to promote the rule of law

A Whakapapa of Tradition Ngarino Ellis,Natalie Robertson,2016-03-21 From the emergence of the chapel and the wharehau in the nineteenth century to the rejuvenation of carving by Apirana Ngata in the 1920s Maori carving went through a rapid evolution from 1830 to 1930 Focusing on thirty meeting houses Ngarino Ellis tells the story of Ngati Porou carving and a profound transformation in Maori art Beginning around 1830 three previously dominant art traditions waka taua war canoes pataka decorated storehouses and whare rangatira chief s houses declined and were replaced by whare karakia churches whare whakairo decorated meeting houses and wharekai dining halls Ellis examines how and why that fundamental transformation took place by exploring the Iwirakau School of carving based in the Waiapu Valley on the East Coast of the North Island An ancestor who lived around the year 1700 Iwirakau is credited for reinvigorating the art of carving in the Waiapu region The six major carvers of his school went on to create more than thirty important meeting houses and other structures During this transformational period carvers and patrons re negotiated key concepts such as tikanga tradition tapu sacredness and mana power authority embedding them within the new architectural forms whilst preserving rituals surrounding the creation and use of buildings A Whakapapa of Tradition tells us much about the art forms themselves but also analyzes the environment that made carving and building possible the patrons who were the enablers and transmitters of culture the carvers who engaged with modern tools and ideas and the communities as a whole who created the new forms of art and architecture This book is both a major study of Ngati Porou carving and an attempt to make sense of Maori art history What makes a tradition in Maori art Ellis asks How do traditions begin Who decides this Conversely how and why do traditions cease And what forces are at play which make some buildings acceptable and others not Beautifully illustrated with new photography by Natalie Robertson and drawing on the work of key scholars to make a new synthetic whole this book will be a landmark volume in the history of writing about Maori art

Placing the Enlightenment Charles W. J. Withers,2008-09-15 The Enlightenment was the age in which the world became modern challenging tradition in favor of reason freedom and critical inquiry While many aspects of the Enlightenment have been rigorously scrutinized its origins and motivations its principal

Britain and the Narration of Travel in the Nineteenth Century Kate Hill, 2017-05-15 Interrogating the multiple ways in which travel was narrated and mediated by and in response to nineteenth century British travelers this interdisciplinary collection examines to what extent these accounts drew on and developed existing tropes of travel The three sections take up personal and intimate narratives that were not necessarily designed for public consumption tales intended for a popular audience and accounts that were more clearly linked with discourses and institutions of power such as imperial processes of conquest and governance Some narratives focus on the things the travelers carried such as souvenirs from the battlefields of Britain's imperial wars while others show the complexity of Victorian dreams of the exotic Still others offer a disapproving glimpse of Victorian mores through the eyes of indigenous peoples in contrast to the imperialist vision of British explorers Swiss hotel registers guest books and guidebooks offer insights into the history of tourism while new photographic technologies the development of the telegraph system and train travel transformed the visual audial and even the conjugal experience of travel The contributors attend to issues of gender and ethnicity in essays on women travelers South African travel narratives and accounts of China during the Opium Wars and analyze the influence of fictional travel narratives Taken together these essays show how these multiple narratives circulated cross fertilised and reacted to one another to produce new narratives new objects and new modes of travel

Race and Identity in the Tasman World, 1769-1840 Rachel Standfield, 2015-09-30 British imperial encounters with indigenous cultures created perceptions and stereotypes that still persist today The initial creation of racial images in relation to violence had particular consequences for land ownership Standfield examines these differences and how they occurred
