Abstract

Teaching Literature through language has become one of the most interesting aspect now-a-days. The traditional method of teaching literature through language is group work tasks for literary study. These tasks, they thought, usually help and supplement the learner to create a new and more effective learning. Especially there are many major changes are taken place in teaching literature over the last three decades. These changes in EFL contexts brought a new outlook in the study of literary texts and interpreting them. The present paper discuss in detail the changes that have been taking place and remedies for them.

KEYWORDS:

Literature, language, traditional method, EFL, literary texts

Teaching literature in L1 and L2 contexts is very critical and crucial in the age of technologically developed world. Generally Most of the teachers adopt the method of comparisons and contrasts between these two while teaching. The strategy they employ while teaching literature depends on the situation and their role while handling the context of the atmosphere. These changing roles of the teachers and the texts demands continuing and unresolved issues surrounding them in their explanations. Interactive and learner-centered approaches to teach literature in English Language Teaching class room is the common and general approach so far the teacher follow during these days. As the days are changing and the learner demands and more text centered and curriculum targeted learning, there is heavy load on teacher to strictly follow various methods in imparting quality based teaching. The traditional method of teaching literature through language is group work tasks for literary study. These tasks, they thought, usually help and supplement the learner to create a new and more effective learning. Especially there are many major changes are taken place in teaching literature over the last three decades. These changes in EFL contexts brought a new outlook in the study of literary texts and interpreting them. Before going to present my research paper titled “Approaches in Teaching Literature through Language” I limit myself to certain areas in my explanations because the area of the title is very vast and unlimited. I feel it is necessary to review the major forms of the scope and methodological innovations within the teaching of literature in order to get a sense of the need for which is currently taking place. It is important to review literature teaching in ELT classroom as it serves a visibly different education functions like transmitting information, developing logical skills in evaluating literature, discussions and etc.,
