Second language acquisition SLA is a field of inquiry that has increased in importance since the 1960s. Currently researchers adopt multiple perspectives in the analysis of learner language, all of them providing different but complementary answers to the understanding of oral and written data produced by young and older learners in different settings. The main goal of this volume is to provide the reader with updated reviews of the major contemporary approaches to SLA, the research carried out within them, and wherever appropriate the implications and/or applications for theory, research, and pedagogy that might derive from the available empirical evidence. The book is intended for SLA researchers as well as for graduate MA/PhD students in SLA research, applied linguistics, and linguistics, as the different chapters will be a guide in their research within the approaches presented. The volume will also be of interest to professionals from other fields interested in the SLA process and the different explanations that have been put forward to account for it.

Approaches and Methods in French Second Language Acquisition Research Martin Howard, 2025-06-15

Against the backdrop of the critical importance of recognising the specificity of learning languages other than English, LOTE in Second Language Acquisition (SLA) research, this volume focuses on a state-of-the-art presentation of the research approaches and methods that characterise French as second language (L2) within contemporary SLA research. The presentation problematises those approaches and methods as a critique of what has been done, identifying a methodological roadmap of what needs to be done in order to advance the methodological agenda in L2 French and its contribution to wider SLA research. The discussion further aims to bridge the interface between methodological issues and the research investigation of a specific LOTE, French, such as in terms of its linguistic characterisation and developmental issues underpinning its acquisition. The analysis extends to approaches and methods across different theoretical paradigms in L2 French in different areas of linguistic development among learners in different learning contexts.
