Grammaticalization is an important concept in general and typological linguistics and a prominent type of explanation in historical linguistics. For historical corpus linguists, grammaticalization theory provides a frame of orientation in their effort to analyze and systematize a fast accumulating mass of data. Students of grammaticalization have become increasingly aware of the potential of existing corpora and established corpus linguistic methodology for their work. This book continues and develops the dialogue between the two fields. All the contributions are based on extensive use of various electronic corpora. Relating corpus practices to recent theoretical concerns of grammaticalization studies, they deal with grammaticalization and historical sociolinguistics, lexicalization and grammaticalization, layering, frequency, grammaticalization and dialects, degrammaticalization and grammaticalization in a contrastive perspective. The papers show that a synthesis of corpus methodology and grammaticalization studies leads to new and interesting insights about the mechanisms of language change and the communicative functions of language.

A Typological Approach to Grammaticalization and Lexicalization Janet Zhiqun Xing, 2020-01-20. Based on comparative analyses of diachronic data, the articles in this volume address both theoretical and methodological issues in the study of grammaticalization and lexicalization in both Eastern and Western languages. The central question raised and discussed in this volume is how, if any, typological properties of the two genetically unrelated language families interact with the processes of grammaticalization and lexicalization.

Approaches to Grammaticalization: Focus on theoretical and methodological issues Elizabeth Closs Traugott, Bernd Heine, 1991. The study of grammaticalization raises a number of fundamental theoretical issues pertaining to the relation of langue and parole, creativity and automatic coding, synchrony and diachrony, categoriality and continua, typological characteristics and language specific forms etc. and therefore challenges some of the basic tenets of twentieth century linguistics. This two volume work presents a number of diverse theoretical viewpoints on grammaticalization and gives insights into the genesis, development and organization of grammatical categories in a number of language world wide, with particular attention to morphosyntactic and semantic/pragmatic issues. The papers in Volume I are divided into two sections: the first concerned with general method and the second with issues of directionality. Those in Volume II are divided into five sections: verbal structure, argument structure, subordination, modality and multiple paths of grammaticalization.

What makes Grammaticalization? Walter Bisang, Nikolaus P. Himmelmann, Björn Wiemer, 2009-02-26. The status of grammaticalization has been the subject of many controversial discussions. The contributions to What makes Grammaticalization approach the prevalent phenomenon from the angle of language structure and focus on the interrelation between the levels of phonology, pragmatics, inference, discourse and the lexicon, and some of them try to integrate the areal perspective. A wealth of data from Slavonic languages as well as from languages of other genetic and areal affiliation is discussed. The book is of interest to linguists specializing in grammaticalization, lexicalization and morphological typology, to language typologists as well as to functional, historical and cognitive linguists.
