Funk, Ayse S. Kadayifci, 2002-02-12 Within the Muslim community the call for peace has manifested and will undoubtedly continue to manifest itself in diverse ways This reflects continuous efforts to interpret and apply foundational Islamic values in specific historical social and cultural situations Islamic concepts of peace have been misrepresented misunderstood or simply ignored There are indeed differences between prevailing Western and Islamic conceptions of peace These differences constitute a basis for an ongoing dialogue on the topic Beneath different interpretations of Islam there is an underlying unity of intention that gives coherence to various approaches to peace These in Islam can be categorized in five paradigms Many Muslims have at one time or another subscribed to views that incorporate aspects of more than one paradigm The model of power politics exalts state authority views peace simply as the absence of war and emphasizes the political necessities created by threatening environments The Islamic world order approach sees peace as a condition defined by the presence of such core Islamic values as order justice equity cultural coexistence as in the Iranian Dialogue of Civilizations initiative and ecological stability Practitioners of Islamic approaches to conflict resolution adhere to a restorative conception of peace that encompasses notions of just compensation for losses renunciation of retribution and forgiveness Though it is not widely recognized an Islamic paradigm for nonviolence does in fact exist and some of the most notable recent applications of it have occurred in South and Southeast Asia Peace is understood as the presence of social justice which must be sought by a just means The last approach to peace the Islamic equivalent of a transformational spiritually centered paradigm defines peace as a condition of harmony attained through the transformation of human consciousness The dominant Western approach to peace finds its substance in political pluralism individual rights and in practice if not in precept consumerism In contrast Islamic precepts permit a view of peace based on communal solidarity social justice faith and cultural pluralism The differences between Western and Islamic approaches to conflict resolution reflect some of the differences between these two respective perspectives on peace While the strongest Western approach to conflict resolution is to conceptualize and solve problems the Islamic approach emphasizes the mending and maintenance of social relationships Muslims see conflict and competition between individuals and groups as a threat to social unity stability and welfare and are often somewhat less optimistic about conflict than the advocates of new Western approaches Research and dialogue on conceptions of peace and peacemaking provide an alternative to the solipsism of culture bound thinking They can promote a deeper understanding of cross cultural differences and a greater appreciation of the shared values and goals that will be needed if true coexistence and perhaps even intercultural complementarity is to be achieved

Interpreting Islam in China Kristian Petersen, 2018 During the early modern period Muslims in China began to embrace the Chinese characteristics of their heritage Several scholar teachers incorporated tenets from traditional Chinese education into their promotion of Islamic knowledge As a result some Sino Muslims established an educational network which utilized an Islamic curriculum made up of Arabic Persian and Chinese works The corpus of Chinese Islamic texts written in this system is collectively labeled the Han Kitab Interpreting Islam in China explores the Sino Islamic intellectual tradition through the works of some of its brightest luminaries Three prominent Sino Muslim authors are used to illustrate transformations within this tradition Wang Daiyu Liu Zhi and Ma Dexin Kristian Petersen puts these scholars in dialogue and demonstrates the continuities and departures within this tradition Through an analysis of their writings he considers several questions How malleable are religious categories and why are they variously interpreted across time How do changing historical circumstances affect the interpretation of religious beliefs and practices How do individuals navigate multiple sources of authority How do practices inform belief Overall he shows that these authors presented an increasingly universalistic portrait of Islam through which Sino Muslims were encouraged to participate within the global community of Muslims The growing emphasis on performing the pilgrimage to Mecca comprehensive knowledge of the Qur'an and personal knowledge of Arabic stimulated communal engagement Petersen demonstrates that the integration of Sino Muslims within a growing global environment where international travel and communication was increasingly possible was accompanied by the rising self awareness of a universally engaged Muslim community
