A M B:

Life a mystery, by A.M.B. A M. B,1881 Soil Survey of Clayton, Fayette, and Henry Counties, Georgia James O. Murphy,1979 Soil Survey of Columbia, McDuffie, and Warren Counties, Georgia Louie W. Frost,1981 Soil Survey,1981 Directives, Publications and Reports Index United States. Coast Guard,1959 The semantics of English -ment nominalizations ,2023-06-02

It is well known that derivational affixes can be highly polysemous producing a range of different often related meanings For example English deverbal nouns with the suffix er can denote instruments opener agents writer locations diner or patients loaner It is commonly assumed that this polysemy arises through a compositional process in which the affix interacts with the semantics of the base Yet despite intensive research in recent years a workable model for this interaction is still under debate In order to study and model the semantic contributions of the base and of the affix a framework is needed in which meanings can be composed and decomposed In this book I formalize the semantic input and output of derivation by means of frames that is recursive attribute value structures that serve to model mental representations of concepts In my approach the input frame offers an array of semantic elements from which an affix may select to construct the derivative s meaning The relationship between base and derivative is made explicit by integrating their respective frame semantic representations into lexical rules and inheritance hierarchies I apply this approach to a qualitative corpus study of the productive relationship between the English nominalizing suffix ment and a semantically delimited set of verbal bases My data set consists of 40 neologisms with base verbs from two semantic classes namely change of state verbs and verbs of psychological state I analyze 369 attestations which were elicited from various corpora with a purposeful sampling approach and which were hand coded using common semantic categories such as event state patient and stimulus My results show that ment can target a systematically restricted set of elements in the frame of a given base verb It thereby produces a range of possible readings in each derivative which becomes ultimately interpretable only within a specific context The derivational process is governed by an interaction of the semantic elements provided by the base on the one hand with properties of the affix e g ment s aversion to animate readings on the other For instance a shift from the verb annoy to a result state reading in annoyment is possible because the input frame of verbs of psychological state offers a RESULT STATE attribute which as is fixed in the inheritance hierarchy is compatible with ment Meanwhile a shift from annoy to an experiencer reading in annoyment fails because the value range of the attribute EXPERIENER is fixed to animate entities so that ment s animacy constraint blocks the inheritance mechanism Furthermore a quantitative exploration of my data set reveals a likely blocking effect for some ment readings Thus while I have found most expected combinations of nominalization and reading attested there are pronounced gaps for readings like instrument or stimulus Such readings are likely to be produced by standardly subject denoting suffixes such as er or ant which may reduce the probability for ment derivation The quantitative analysis furthermore shows that within the subset of attested combinations ambiguity is widespread with 43% of all combinations of nominalization and reading being only attested ambiguously This book shows how a derivational process acts on the semantics of a given verbal base by reporting on an in depth qualitative study of the semantic contributions of both the base and the affix Furthermore it demonstrates that an explicit semantic decomposition of the base is essential for the analysis of the resulting derivative s semantics The London Gazette Great Britain,1916

Soil Survey, Saluda County, South Carolina Wallace Jefferson Camp,1962 The Diplomatic Service List Great Britain. Diplomatic Service Administration Office,1968 Ticks, a Monograph of the Ixodoidea George Henry Falkiner Nuttall,William Francis Cooper,Cecil Warburton,Louis Edward Robinson,1926
