Nourishment Fred Provenza, 2018-11-26 Nourishment will change the way you eat and the way you think Mark Schatzker author of The Dorito Effect Provenza is a wise observer of the land and the animals and becomes transformed to learn the meaning of life Temple Grandin Reflections on feeding body and spirit in a world of change Animal scientists have long considered domestic livestock to be too dumb to know how to eat right but the lifetime research of animal behaviorist Fred Provenza and his colleagues has debunked this myth Their work shows that when given a choice of natural foods livestock have an astoundingly refined palate nibbling through the day on as many as fifty kinds of grasses forbs and shrubs to meet their nutritional needs with remarkable precision In Nourishment Provenza presents his thesis of the wisdom body a wisdom that links flavor feedback relationships at a cellular level with biochemically rich foods to meet the body's nutritional and medicinal needs Provenza explores the fascinating complexity of these relationships as he raises and answers thought provoking questions about what we can learn from animals about nutritional wisdom What kinds of memories form the basis for how herbivores and humans recognize foods Can a body develop nutritional and medicinal memories in utero and early in life Do humans still possess the wisdom to select nourishing diets or has that ability been hijacked by nutritional authorities Is taking supplements and enriching and fortifying foods helping us or is it hurting us On a broader scale Provenza explores the relationships among facets of complex poorly understood ever changing ecological social and economic systems in light of an unpredictable future To what degree do we lose contact with life sustaining energies when the foods we eat come from anywhere but where we live To what degree do we lose the mythological relationship that links us physically and spiritually with Mother Earth who nurtures our lives Provenza's paradigm changing exploration of these questions has implications that could vastly improve our health through a simple change in the way we view our relationships with the plants and animals we eat Nourishment is a conversation between science culture and a greater spiritual or cosmological umbrella Montana Public

Doty, 2010-02-01 Mammalian pheromones audiomones visuomones and snarks Richard Doty argues that they all belong in the same category objects of imagination For more than 50 years researchers including many prominent scientists have identified pheromones as the triggers for a wide range of mammalian behaviors and endocrine responses In this provocative book renowned olfaction expert Richard L Doty rejects this idea and states bluntly that in contrast to insects mammals do not have pheromones Doty systematically debunks the claims and conclusions of studies that purport to reveal the existence of mammalian pheromones He demonstrates that there is no generally accepted scientific definition of what constitutes a mammalian pheromone and that attempts to divide stimuli and complex behaviors into pheromonal and nonpheromonal categories have primarily failed Doty s controversial assertion belies a continued fascination with the pheromone concept numerous claims of its chemical isolation and what he sees as the wasted expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars by industry and government The Great Pheromone Myth directly challenges ideas about the role chemicals play in mammalian behavior and reproductive processes It is a must have reference for biologists psychologists neuroscientists and readers interested in animal behavior ecology and evolution Bibliography of Agriculture , 1976 Mammalian Social Learning Hilary O. Box, Kathleen R. Gibson, 1999-10-07 Social learning commonly refers to the social transfer of information and skill among individuals It encompasses a wide range of behaviours that include where and how to obtain food how to interact with members of one s own social group and to identify and respond appropriately to predators The behaviour of experienced individuals provides natural sources of information by which inexperienced individuals may learn about the opportunities and hazards of their environment and develop and modify their own behaviour as a result A wide diversity of species is discussed in this book some of which have never been discussed in this context before and particular reference is made to their natural life strategies Social learning in humans is also considered by comparison with other mammals especially in their technological and craft traditions Moreover a discussion is included of the social learning abilities of prehistoric hominids
