

Take, for example, a basketball fan in Summerlin, Nevada. The house has got an indoor basketball court and an area for people to watch matches behind a glass wall. If his guests prefer, they can follow the action on one of the video monitors installed all over the house. He recently sold the house for more than four million dollars.

The next house is in Ankara, Turkey. The climber who lives there built a climbing wall on the side of the house. He wanted it to be higher than anything in a gym and it had to look like natural rock. An American company built it in the end, so it was very expensive.

There's a house for sale in Castle Rock, Colorado where a famous baseball player once lived. When the player bought the land, there were plans to build 39 houses there. After he built his own house, he used the rest of the land for a full-size baseball field. It's surrounded by a fence with trees behind it. Finally, there's a house for sale in Updown, near London, which is perfect for sports fans who like more than one sport. The $150 million home was the most expensive house in the world when builders finished it in 2006. It has a bowling alley, two squash courts, a full gym, stables with five horses and a football pitch.

Bes: Fatima, where are your parents from?

Fatima: Well, my mum's German, and my dad's from India.

B: Wow! Two completely different nationalities!

F: That's right.

B: Do you know your German family?

F: Yes, I do. I've got an aunt and an uncle, and three cousins. They live in the south, near Munich.

B: What about your family in India?

F: Yes, I know them, too. I've got two aunts, an uncle and six cousins. Also, my grandmother is still alive. She's 80.

B: Where do they live?

F: They all live in Mumbai. My grandmother lives with one of my aunts.

B: What is your family in India like?

F: They're all very friendly. They love having visitors and there's a big party when we go to India to see them.

B: What about your German family?

F: They're friendly, too. But they're different from my family in India. In India, people spend most of their free time with their families. In Germany, people spend more time with friends than with family.

B: So, which country do you prefer?

F: Oh, I like both of them. But there is one thing that's better in India.

B: Really? What's that?

F: The food! My aunts are both very good cooks, and they cook fantastic dinners!

Presenter: Now, it's always nice to receive an invitation to a wedding, but it's often difficult to know what to wear. Our fashion expert, Emily Pepperday, is here to give us some advice. Emily, let's start with winter weddings. What should we wear?

Guest: Well, at a winter wedding you have to look good, but you don't want to be cold. Women should wear a warm dress – deep colours like red, blue or green are best. If you want to wear boots, you should take some shoes with you and change before the ceremony. Men should wear a dark suit, that's a jacket and trousers of the same colour. They can wear a jumper under the jacket, if necessary.

P: I suppose there's the opposite problem at summer weddings, Emily?

G: That's right. In the summer, you want to look good without being too hot. Women can wear long or short dresses – it really doesn't matter. But this time they should wear light colours. Men should wear a shirt and jacket, but they don't have to wear a tie.

P: That makes sense. Now, Emily, some wedding invitations say our clothes should be 'casual'. Does that mean we can wear what we want?

G: Not really, no. You don't have to wear a long dress or a suit, for example, but you shouldn't wear jeans or shorts, either. You should wear something you aren't embarrassed to wear to work. Women can wear a sundress with some nice shoes, and men are OK with smart trousers and a jacket.

P: Right. And what should we wear if the invitation specifies 'formal' clothes?

G: Formal for women usually means a long dress with high-heeled shoes and a nice bag. Men should wear a black suit and tie with clean black shoes. It can be quite expensive to buy clothes for a formal wedding!

P: One last question, Emily. Apart from jeans or shorts, is there anything that we should never wear to a wedding?

G: Yes. Women should never wear white to a wedding – that's for the woman who is getting married. And neither men nor women should wear trainers.

P: Thanks for that, Emily.

G: My pleasure.
