Landscapes of the Learned Elizabeth FitzPatrick, 2023-04-15 Gaelic literati were an elite and influential group in the social hierarchy of Irish lordships between c 1300 and 1600 From their estates they served Gaelic and Old English ruling families in the arts of history law medicine and poetry They farmed kept guest houses conducted schools and maintained networks of learning In other capacities they were involved in political assemblies and memorializing dynastic histories in landscape This book presents a framework for identifying and interpreting the settings and built

heritages of their estates in lordship borderscapes It shows that a more textured definition of what this learned class represented can be achieved through the material record of the buildings and monuments they used and where their lands were positioned in the political map Where literati lived and worked are conceived as expressions of their intellectual and political cultures Mediated by case studies of the landscapes of their estates dwellings and schools the methodology is predominantly field based using archaeological investigation and topographic and spatial analyses and drawing on historical and literary texts place names and lore in referencing named people to places More widely the study contributes a landscape perspective to the growing body of work on autochthonous intellectual culture and the exercise of power by ruling families in late medieval and early modern northern European societies The Social Context of Technology Leo Webley, Sophia Adams, Joanna Bruck, 2020-06-30 The Social Context of Technology explores non ferrous metalworking in Britain and Ireland during the Bronze and Iron Ages c 2500 BC to 1st century AD Bronze working dominates the evidence though the crafting of other non ferrous metals including gold silver tin and lead is also considered Metalwork has long played a central role in accounts of European later prehistory Metals were important for making functional tools and elaborate decorated objects that were symbols of prestige Metalwork could be treated in special or ritualised ways by being accumulated in large hoards or placed in rivers or bogs But who made these objects Prehistoric smiths have been portrayed by some as prosaic technicians and by others as mystical figures akin to magicians They have been seen both as independent travelling entrepreneurs and as the dependents of elite patrons Hitherto these competing models have not been tested through a comprehensive assessment of the archaeological evidence for metalworking This volume fills that gap with analysis focused on metalworking tools and waste such as crucibles moulds casting debris and smithing implements The find contexts of these objects are examined both to identify places where metalworking occurred and to investigate the cultural practices behind the deposition of metalworking debris The key questions are what was the social context of this craft and what was its ideological significance How did this vary regionally and change over time As well as elucidating a key aspect of later prehistoric life in Britain and Ireland this important examination by leading scholars contributes to broader debates on material culture and the social role of craft Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland, 2003 Ulster Journal of Archaeology ,1895
