

Communication Self-Assessment

Oral communication is the ability to use speech to share thoughts and information. Strong oral communication skills are essential to being able to present your ideas clearly in a variety of situations such as: explaining procedures to a co-worker, giving directions to a friend or dealing with customer service to discuss a problem with your phone bill. Complete this self-assessment to help you understand your oral communication strengths and areas for improvement.

Instructions:

1. Read each statement in Section 1 and place a check mark in the column that best describes how well you can complete that task. Tip: Think about your work and life experiences as you consider each task.
2. Review your responses for each task. If you have checked five or more in the "Somewhat" and/or "No" columns, you may want to consider upgrading your oral communication skills.
3. Complete Section 2 to identify your training needs.

Section 1: Self-Assessment

I can...	Yes	Somewhat	No
Ask routine questions to obtain information.
Leave brief phone messages.
Understand short messages and communicate the information to others.
Give simple instructions to others on a familiar topic.
Explain simple facts.
Follow simple oral instructions.
Listen to others without interrupting.
Use appropriate body language (e.g. smiling, nodding, making eye contact) while having a conversation.
Discuss work-related problems or issues in detail.
Ask complex questions to get the appropriate information.
Communicate with others to resolve minor conflicts, such as customer complaints.
Communicate with others to co-ordinate work or resolve problems.
Express my opinions and ideas clearly and concisely.
Restate information that is presented orally.
Train or give clear instructions to a co-worker.
Give a brief presentation to a small group.

Instructions:

1. Read each statement in Section 1 and place a check mark in the column that best describes how well you can complete that task. Tip: Think about your work and life experiences as you consider each task.
2. Review your responses for each task. If you have checked five or more in the "Somewhat" and/or "No" columns, you may want to consider upgrading your oral communication skills.
