Katz, 2012-04-13 Arabic one of the official languages of the United Nations is spoken by more than half a billion people around the world and is of increasing importance in today's political and economic spheres. The study of the Arabic language has a long and rich history; earliest grammatical accounts date from the 8th century and include full syntactic, morphological, and phonological analyses of the vernaculars and of Classical Arabic. In recent years, the academic study of Arabic has become increasingly sophisticated and broad. This state-of-the-art volume presents the most recent research in Arabic linguistics from a theoretical point of view, including computational linguistics, syntax, semantics, and historical linguistics. It also covers sociolinguistics, applied linguistics, and discourse analysis by looking at issues such as gender, urbanization, and language ideology. Underlying themes include the changing and evolving attitudes of speakers of Arabic and theoretical approaches to linguistic variation in the Middle East.

Arabic Grammar and Linguistics Yasir Suleiman, 2013-01-11 This book explores aspects of the Arabic Grammatical Tradition and Arabic Linguistics from both a theoretical and descriptive perspective. It also touches on issues of relevance to other disciplines, particularly Qur'anic exegesis and jurisprudence. The links between the fields of language and religion are historically strong in the Arabic and Islamic traditions, as so much time and effort was spent by grammarians in interpreting the precise meanings of two of the main sources of Islamic jurisprudence, the Quran and Hadith. Prof. Suleiman has assembled an international team of experts in this area and presents a thorough review of the sources and arguments. The book will be of interest to all students, researchers, and teachers of Arabic Language and Culture.

Arabic Grammatical Tradition Yasir Suleiman, 2019-08-07 The concept of ta'leel occupies a central position in the Arabic intellectual tradition. In grammar, it covers a host of areas of immense theoretical interest, including description, methodology, epistemology, and explanation. This book sets out to deal with the concept by investigating the major works of those grammarians who have contributed most in theoretical terms to its development and elaboration in the Arabic Grammatical Tradition. It seeks to do so by considering the relation between grammar on the one hand and jurisprudence and theology on the other. In dealing with the above issues, an appeal is made both directly and indirectly to some of the relevant ideas in the philosophy of science as they apply to this tradition. The approach adopted is cross-disciplinary in orientation to reflect the centrality of ta'leel in the Arabic intellectual tradition, and reference is therefore made to the employment of this concept in jurisprudence and to a lesser extent, theology. This is the first major study in any European language or in Arabic to be published on the topic. It will be of interest to Arabic grammarians, students of Arabic, and general linguistics, and to specialists in Islamic jurisprudence and philosophy.

Key Features and Parameters in Arabic Grammar Abdelkader Fassi Fehri, 2012 In light of recent generative minimalism and comparative parametric theory of language variation, the book investigates key features and parameters of Arabic grammar. Part I addresses morpho-syntactic and semantic interfaces in temporality, aspectuality, and actionality, including the Past Perfect, Perfective, ambiguity, akin to the very synthetic temporal morphology collocating time adverb, construal, and interpretability of verbal Number, as pluractional Part II is dedicated to nominal architecture the behaviour of bare nouns as true indefinites the count mass dichotomy re examined in light of general collective and singulative DP properties the mirror image ordering of serialized adjectives and N to D Move in synthetic possession proper names and individuated vocatives Part III examines the role of CP in time and space anchoring double access reading in a DAR language such as Arabic sequence of tense SOT silent pronominal categories in consistent null subject languages including referential and generic pro and the interpretability of inflection Semantic and formal parameters are set out within a mixed macro micro parametric model of language variation The book is of particular interest to students researchers and teachers of Arabic Semitic comparative typological or general linguistics
