San Jacinto 1 Augusto Oyuela-Caycedo, Renee M. Bonzani, 2005-06-26 A significant work of neotropical archaeology presenting evidence of early hunter gatherers who produced fiber tempered ceramics Few topics in the development of humans have prompted as much interest and debate as those of the origins of pottery and agriculture The first appearance of pottery in any area of the world is heralded as a new stage in the progress of humans toward a more complex arrangement of thought and society Cultures are defined and separated by the occurrence of pottery types and the association of pottery with mobility and agriculture continues to drive research in anthropology For these reasons the discovery of the earliest fiber tempered pottery in the New World and carbonized remains identified as maize kernels is exciting San Jacinto 1 is the archaeological site located in the savanna region of the north coast of Colombia South America where excavations by led by the authors have revealed evidence of mobile hunter gatherers who made pottery and who collected and processed plants from 6000 to 5000 B P The site is believed to show an early human adaptation to the tropics in the context of significant environmental changes that were taking place at the time This volume presents the data gathered and the interpretations made during excavation and analysis of the San Jacinto 1 site By examining the social activities of a human population in a highly seasonal environment it adds greatly to our contemporary understanding of the historical ecology of the tropics Study of the artifacts excavated at the site allows a window into the early processes of food production in the New World Finally the data reveals that the origins of ceramic technology in the tropics were tied to a reduction in mobility and an increase in territoriality and are widely applicable to similar studies of sedentism and agriculture worldwide

The Interpretation of Archaeological Spatial Patterning Ellen M. Kroll, T. Douglas Price, 2013-06-29 Investigations of archaeological intrasite spatial patterns have generally taken one of two directions studies that introduced and explored methods for the analysis of archaeological spatial patterns or those that described and analyzed the for mation of spatial patterns in actualistic ethnographic experimental or natu ral contexts The archaeological studies were largely quantitative in nature concerned with the recognition and definition of patterns the actualistic efforts were often oriented more toward interpretation dealing with how patterns formed and what they meant Our research group on archaeological spatial analysis at the University of Wisconsin Madison has been working for several years on both quantitative and interpretive problems Both lines of investigation are closely related and are important complements In order to demonstrate the convergence of archaeological and actualistic studies for the understanding of intrasite spatial patterns we organized a symposium at the 52nd Annual Meeting of the Society of American Archaeology in Toronto Canada in May 1987 The symposium titled The Interpretation of Stone Age Archaeological Spatial Patterns was organized into two sessions The six papers presented in the morning session five of which comprise Part I of this volume focused on ethnoarchaeological and experimental research Michael Schiffer was the discussant for this half of the symposium Our intention for the ethnoarchaeological contributions to the symposium and volume was the delineation of some of the significant accomplishments achieved thus far by actualistic studies regarding the formation of spatial patterns
