Convicts and the Arts Professor Max Howell, Dr Lingyu Xie, 2013-11-01 There are a considerable number of books on the art of the convicts so Convicts Art has been covered reasonably well but art is only once facet of the arts that has been examined to any extent This book concerns itself with Convicts the Arts This book then endeavors to look at the convicts contribution to the arts and demonstrates without doubt that the convicts made a significantly broader contribution to the culture of Australia than previously thought There is a common misconception that all convicts were immediately institutionalised in a cell and convict culture was solely a prison culture It needs reinforcing that when the First Fleet arrived there were no prisons in Australia no cells where they could put the convicts The early governors and principal authorities quite logically endeavoured to use whatever skills the convicts had So artists generally forgers were placed with those who were interested in recording a visual history of this new land Among the convicts were bricklayers house painters jewelers silversmiths goldsmiths and so on and some of them made significant contributions to the emerging society Some of these contributions will be developed herein This work endeavors to examine the convicts contribution to the arts in Australia in areas like the writing of novels poetry autobiographies sculpture theatre music architecture jewelry the press decorative arts and pottery

Australia and the Birth of the International Bill of Human Rights, 1946-1966 Annemarie Devereux, 2005 Australia and the Birth of the International Bill of Human Rights provides the first in depth examination of Australia's first reactions to international human rights during the negotiations for the International Bill of Rights the Universal Declaration of Human Rights the ICCPR and ICESCR It follows Australian policy from 1946 the first year in which the United Nations began discussing a Bill of Rights until 1966 when the twin Covenants were finalized The book looks at what successive Australian Governments understood by human rights and how they responded to discussion of sensitive domestic topics such as immigration policies self determination for inhabitants of trust territories equal pay for men and women and balancing human rights and national security As well as considering Australian policies towards substantive rights the book looks at Australian policies towards international schemes for protecting rights including early proposals for an International Court of Human Rights and its later support for more modest technical expertise based assistance for States debates often taking place against the background of highly politicised issues such as the Cold War and the fight against apartheid In looking at this 20 year period the book demonstrates the way in which Australian policy changed substantially over time as between Labor and Liberal administrations between Ministers and bureaucrats and as between decision makers with markedly distinct visions of the ideal relationship between citizens and a State and the individual State and the international community In highlighting the diversity of views about human rights this book thus challenges the notion that Australia has historically supported a universally understood set of human rights norms and underlines the number of variables which may be affecting ongoing implementation of human rights standards The
