African Writers on African Writing G. D. Killam, 1973 Twelve African Writers Gerald Moore, 2024-04-01

Originally published in 1980 this book introduces the student to twelve of the most exciting and significant African authors of the 20th Century whose work represents Anglophone and Francophone writing with translation drawn from West East and Southern Africa Twelve African Writers was a revised updated and extended edition of the pioneering Seven African Writers which did so much to make students aware of African literature The book also contains an extensive bibliography of the works not just of the selected writers but other important African authors and recommendations of further critical works

African Authors Donald E. Herdeck, 1973 A New Generation of African Writers Brenda Cooper, 2013 Brenda Cooper examines the work of the new generation of African writers who have placed migration as central to their writing There is a growing interest in books by writers of African origin These authors have often grown up or passed their early adult years out of Africa The Orange Prize for Fiction was awarded in London 2007 to Chimamanda Ngozie Adichie's Half of a Yellow Sun and the Caine Prize for African Writing has introduced new writers such as Leila Aboulela Biyi Bandele and Chimamanda Adichie herself to agents and publishers This examination of the extraordinary work which has recently appeared is therefore very timely Migration is a central theme of much African fiction written in English Here Brenda Cooper tracks the journeys undertaken by a new generation of African writers their protagonists and the solid objects that populate their fiction to depict the material realities of their multiple worlds and languages She explores the uses to which the English language is put in order to understand these worlds and demonstrates how these writers have contested the dominance of colonising metaphors The writers challenge is to find an English that can effectively express their many lives languages and identities BRENDA COOPER was for many years Director of the Centre for African Studies and Professor in the English department at the University of Cape Town where she is now an Emeritus Professor In 2009 she moved to Salford where she is an Honorary Research Associate at the University of Manchester She has published widely on African fiction and postcolonial literary theory Southern Africa South Africa Botswana Namibia Lesotho and Swaziland University of KwaZulu Natal Press The Ordeal of the African Writer Charles Larson, 2001-08-01 The literatures of the English language experienced an extraordinary transformation in the second half of the 20th century as a result of the creative energy released by decolonization But as this book demonstrates only a small number of African writers Chinua Achebe Ben Okri Nuruddin Farah and Wole Soyinka have become known outside their own continent They also face and this is the subject of this book enormous obstacles within Africa getting their work published let alone supporting themselves financially from their writing Charles R Larson has followed African literature for nearly 40 years Here he combines writers own testimony pen portraits of their lives and factual investigation in order to explore the dimensions of the problem Who is the readership in Africa In what language should an African writer write What obstacles do African publishing houses face and how do they treat their authors What has been the response of publishing houses in Europe and America How does economic crisis and political repression make the situation more difficult And most importantly can anything be done to build a more supportive environment in which the Continent's new writers can produce and publish their work This book takes the reader into the little known human reality of what it is like to be an African writer

Writing Africa in the Short Story Ernest Emenyonu, 2013 The success of the Caine Prize for African Writing and the growth of online publishing have played key roles in putting the short story in its rightful place within the study and criticism of African literature African writers have much more than the critics recognized the beauty and potency of the short story Always the least studied in African literature classrooms and the most critically overlooked genre in African literature today the African short story is now given the attention it deserves Contributors here take a close look at the African short story to re define its own peculiar pedigree chart its trajectory critique its present state and examine its creative possibilities They examine how the short story and the novel complement each other or exist in contradistinction within the context of culture and politics history and public memory legends myths and folklore Ernest Emenyonu is Professor of Africana Studies at the University of Michigan Flint USA the editorial board is composed of scholars from US UK and African universities Nigeria HEBN
