African Inland Fisheries Aquaculture And The Environment Fishing Newss:

African Inland Fisheries, Aquaculture and the Environment K. Remane, 1997-09-16 The environmental degradation of African inland waters is increasing though still not as severe as in industrial countries This will become a serious problem within the next decade if no preventative management actions are taken Nevertheless there is still potential for increased production which can be realized by improving the management of existing stocks utilizing unexploited stocks and increasing the exploitation of reservoirs In addition the promotion of aquaculture which is mainly extensive or semi intensive in Africa will require determined action to prevent uncontrolled and unsustainable development

Environmental Impacts of Aquaculture Kenneth D. Black, 2001 The continued expansion of aquaculture in a wide range of environments and of a growing number of species has led to increasing demands on aquatic resources These demands vary with the culture species the culture method and the environmental and ecological setting While there are many examples of efforts to mitigate detrimental environmental effects the environment remains the ultimate constraint on the future sustainable development of this maturing industry The relationships between the activities of aquaculture and the environment are therefore of economic importance as well as of scientific interest and for these reasons a large international research community has developed over the past decade In this volume the resultant research is synthesised and critically reviewed providing a source of reference to the most important recent developments at research and professional level The authors are internationally recognised authorities who have made significant contributions to their respective research areas The first part of the volume is organised in terms of the major culture types This is followed by chapters of general relevance to aquaculture The volume is designed to complement Biology of Farmed Fish eds K D Black A D Pickering also published in this series It is directed at fish biologists shellfish biologists and environmental scientists working in the academic governmental and industrial sectors

AD15E 2008 Small-scale freshwater fish farming, 2008 Agrodoks provide practical information on small scale sustainable agriculture in the tropics

Wetland Management and Sustainable Livelihoods in Africa Adrian Wood, Alan Dixon, Matthew McCartney, 2013-06-19 In this book the authors argue for a paradigm shift in the way African wetlands are considered Current policies and wetland management are too frequently underpinned by a perspective that views agriculture simply as a threat and disregards its important contribution to livelihoods In rural areas where people are entrenched in poverty wetlands in particular wetland agriculture have a critical role to play in supporting and developing peoples livelihoods Furthermore as populations rise and climate change takes grip they will be increasingly important The authors argue that an approach to wetland management that is much more people focused is required That is an approach that instead of being concerned primarily with environmental outcomes is centred on livelihood outcomes supported by the sustainable use of natural wetland resources The authors stress the need for Integrated Water Resource Management and landscape approaches to ensure sustainable use of wetlands throughout a river catchment and the need for wetland management interventions to engage with a wide range of stakeholders They also assess the feasibility of creating incentives and value in wetlands to support sustainable use Drawing on nine empirical case studies this book highlights the different ways in which sustainable use of wetlands has been sought each case focusing on specific issues about wetlands agriculture and livelihoods FAO Regional Technical Expert Workshop on Cage Culture in Africa, 20-23 October 2004, Entebbe, Uganda Matthias Halwart, John Frederic Moehl, 2006-01-01

Cage culture is an established and profitable aquaculture system in many countries but it is a relatively complex culture system that is still in its infancy in the Africa region This expert workshop was convened with the aim of identifying the key issues for sustainable cage culture in the region and developing a framework of good management practice It concluded that although cage aquaculture could be an important development opportunity it will require an effective policy framework to ensure that structural constraints to development are overcome and that development is both equitable and sustainable Aquatic Ecosystems Nicholas V. C. Polunin, 2008-09-11 Concern about future supplies of fresh water to society to meet the full range of human needs now comes very high on the priority list of global societal issues An overarching issue which this book addresses is whether global climate change is a dominant driver of change in the structure and function of all natural water based ecosystems or whether direct human population growth and accelerated consumption are playing an equal or greater role This book divides the whole aquatic realm into 21 ecosystems from those on land both saline and fresh water to those of the open and deep oceans It draws on the understanding of leading ecologists to summarize the state and likely condition by the year 2025 of each of the ecosystems Written for academic researchers and environmental professionals the aim is to put the climate change debate into a broader context as a basis for conservation science and planning Thirty years of onchocerciasis control in West Africa Laurent Yaméogo, 2003 The Rehabilitation of the Delta of the Senegal River in Mauritania Olivier Hamerlynck, Stéphanie Duvail, 2003 Global Characterization of Inland Fishery Enhancements and Associated Environmental Impacts Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations. Inland Water Resources and Aquaculture Service, 1999 Ecological and Genetic Implications of Aquaculture Activities Theresa M. Bert, 2007-08-30 In this book numerous prominent aquaculture researchers contribute 27 chapters that provide overviews of aquaculture effects on the environment They comprise a comprehensive synthesis of many ecological and genetic problems implicated in the practice of aquaculture and of many proven attempted or postulated solutions to those problems This is an outstanding source of reference for all types of aquaculture activities
