Making Women's Medicine Masculine Monica H. Green, 2008-03-20 Making Women's Medicine Masculine challenges the common belief that prior to the eighteenth century men were never involved in any aspect of women's healthcare in Europe Using sources ranging from the writings of the famous twelfth century female practitioner Trota of Salerno all the way to the great tomes of Renaissance male physicians and covering both medicine and surgery this study demonstrates that men slowly established more and more authority in diagnosing and prescribing treatments for women's gynaecological conditions especially infertility and even certain obstetrical conditions Even if their hands on knowledge of women's bodies was limited by contemporary mores men were able to establish their increasing authority in this and all branches of medicine due to their greater access to literacy and the knowledge contained in books whether in Latin or the vernacular As Monica Green shows while works written in French Dutch English and Italian were sometimes addressed to women nevertheless even these were often re appropriated by men both by practitioners who treated women and by laymen interested to learn about the secrets of generation While early in the period women were considered to have authoritative knowledge on women's conditions hence the widespread influence of the alleged authoress Trotula by the end of the period to be a woman was no longer an automatic qualification for either understanding or treating the conditions that most commonly afflicted the female sex with implications of women's exclusion from production of knowledge on their own bodies extending to the present day

Neighboring Faiths David Nirenberg, 2014-10-20 Essays on how Jews Muslims and Christians have coexisted or not over the centuries from a particularly incisive and trustworthy historian of religion Commonweal Christianity Judaism and Islam are usually treated as autonomous religions but in fact across the long course of their histories the three religions have developed in interaction with one another In Neighboring Faiths David Nirenberg examines how Muslims Christians and Jews lived with and thought about each other during the Middle Ages and what the medieval past can tell us about how they do so today There have been countless scripture based studies of the three religions of the book but Nirenberg goes beyond those to pay close attention to how the three religious neighbors loved tolerated massacred and expelled each other all in the name of God in periods and places both long ago and far away Nirenberg argues that the three religions need to be studied in terms of how each affected the development of the others over time their proximity of religious and philosophical thought as well as their overlapping geographies and how the three neighbors define and continue to define themselves and their place in terms of one another From dangerous attractions leading to interfaith marriage to interreligious conflicts leading to segregation violence and sometimes extermination to strategies for bridging the interfaith gap through language vocabulary and poetry Nirenberg aims to understand the intertwined past of the three faiths as a way for their heirs to produce the future together Will be of extraordinary importance not only for specialists in the field but also for general readers and anyone interested in the relations among the three religions Teofilo F Ruiz University of California Los Angeles

Women of God and Arms Nancy Bradley Warren, 2011-06-03 The religious and political spheres of the later medieval and early modern periods were tightly and indisputably interwoven as illustrated by the papal schism the Hundred Years War the Reconquest of Spain and the English Reformation In these events as well as in the larger religiopolitical systems in which they unfolded female saints devout lay women and monastic women played central roles In Women of God and Arms Nancy Bradley Warren explores the political dimensions of the religious practices of women ranging from St Colette of Corbie to Isabel of Castile to English nuns exiled during the reign of Elizabeth I Just as religious and political systems were bound up with one another so too were the internal and external politics of England and several continental realms Blood and marriage connected the English dynasties of Lancaster and York with those of France Burgundy Flanders and Castile creating tangled networks of alliances and animosities In addition to being linked through ties of kinship these realms were joined by frequent textual and cultural exchanges Warren draws upon a wide variety of sources hagiography chronicles monastic records devotional treatises military manuals political propaganda and texts traditionally designated as literary as she examines the ways manifestations of female spirituality operated at the intersections of civic international and ecclesiastical politics Her exploration breaches boundaries separating the medieval and the early modern the religious and the secular the material and the symbolic the literary and the historical as it sheds new light on well known figures such as Joan of Arc Isabel of Castile and Elizabeth I

Chivalry and Exploration, 1298-1630 Jennifer Robin Goodman, 1998 The literature of medieval knighthood is shown to have influenced exploration narratives from Marco Polo to Captain John Smith Explorers from Marco Polo to Captain John Smith viewed their travels and discoveries in the light of attitudes they absorbed from the literature of medieval knighthood Their own accounts and contemporary narratives reinforced by the interest of early printers reveal this interplay but historians of exploration on the one hand and of chivalry on the other have largely ignored this cultural connection Jennifer Goodman convincingly develops the idea of the chivalric romance as an imaginative literature of travel she traces the publication of medieval chivalric texts alongside exploration narratives throughout the later middle ages and renaissance and reveals parallel themes and preoccupations She illustrates this with the histories of a sequence of explorers and their links with chivalry from Marco Polo to Captain John Smith and including Gadifer de la Salle and his expedition to the Canary
