Islam in American Prisons Professor Hamid Reza Kusha, 2013-02-28 The growth of Islam both worldwide and particularly in the United States is especially notable among African American inmates incarcerated in American state and federal penitentiaries This growth poses a powerful challenge to American penal philosophy structured on the ideal of rehabilitating offenders through penance and appropriate penal measures Islam in American Prisons argues that prisoners converting to Islam seek an alternative form of redemption one that poses a powerful epistemological as well as ideological challenge to American penology Meanwhile following the events of 9 11 some prison inmates have converted to radical anti Western Islam and have become sympathetic to the goals and tactics of the Al Qa ida organization This new study examines this multifaceted phenomenon and makes a powerful argument for the objective examination of the rehabilitative potentials of faith based organizations in prisons including the faith of those who convert to Islam

Crime, Violence and Minority Youths Becky Tatum, 2017-11-22 This title was first published in 2000 Mainstream criminology has devoted little attention to minority perspectives in crime and violence Criminologists who have examined minority perspectives have addressed the issue in a cursory manner providing only brief summaries of the propositions of the perspective This book provides a comprehensive examination of one minority perspective on crime the colonial model Specifically the book discusses how the colonial model applies to African and Hispanic Americans and what the perspective adds to mainstream theorizing It further discusses the limitations of the perspective revises the perspective to improve theoretical validity and subjects the revised perspective to empirical validation Preliminary findings suggest that the colonial model is more effective in explaining African American delinquency
