Supporting Leaders for School Improvement Through Self-Care and Wellbeing Bradley W. Carpenter, Julia Mahfouz, Kerry Robinson, 2024-01-01 School leadership instability is particularly problematic for scholars and practitioners concerned with PK 12 school improvement as second only to teachers campus leadership has been identified as a primary factor in students academic success Young et al 2007 Yet while principals play an indispensable role in students academic success the job has become considerably more stressful as the role of a school leader continues to evolve Specifically added responsibilities increased work intensity and the ever present menace of high stakes accountability have intensified the stress levels encountered by today s school leaders Carpenter Chaplain 2001 Darmody Wang et al 2018 This intensification negatively impacts a school s teaching staff and its students as the overall quality of the school experience can deteriorate if principals are unable to meet their potential due to the burnout and fatigue associated with chronic stress Darmody Devos et al 2007 For principals to fully realize their ability to serve as catalysts for school improvement they should be allowed to prioritize physical mental cognitive and emotional health Desired levels of wellbeing occur in the absence of chronic physical social psychological emotional economic and cognitive distress La Placa et al 2013 As authors in this volume demonstrate many school leaders have commenced specific practices targeting cognitive emotional and behavioral wellbeing to cope with occupational stress and flourishing or at the very least surviving in such a challenging environment Among coping strategies leaders have adopted include mindfulness and other wellbeing interventions strategies intended to facilitate healthier lifestyles relieve stress and improve personal resilience Aviles Mahfouz 2018 Wells 2015 Recently there has been a call to consider educational leadership through a positive human flourishing lens Research in this area focuses on integrating wellbeing practices in professional development programs for teachers and school administrators to highlight the positive effects of personal and collective wellbeing in schools Cherkowski Benn et al 2012 Dvor a kova et al 2017 Jennings 2015 Meiklejohn et al 2012 Mahfouz et al 2018 New understandings about the relationship between school administrators wellbeing and school improvement efforts should ignite interest within the field As such this book s chapters are organized into four distinct sections that provide a an overview of the field Section I b an empirical argument for why such research is essential Section II c wellbeing models to be considered for use in the PK 12 setting Section III and d specific wellbeing practices and frameworks currently being in PK 12 Section IV
