

7 BASIC DOG TRAINING COMMANDS

www.dogsploot.com

SIT

Sitting is usually the first command to be introduced to a dog or puppy. To know how to do it, visit our website: www.dogsploot.com

DOWN

Another practical command is down or lay down. This is great for all dogs, but especially for large dogs, but it's a little difficult one to learn for dogs. When your dog learns to be comfortable in a down position, you can take him or her to the park or a sidewalk café. A dog that is relaxed in public is a non-threat to other people and pets and allows you the freedom to enjoy a good book or catch up with friends. It also helps anxious or scared dogs to relax.

STAY

This command will teach your dog self-control. You could pair it with sit and down. You are likely to cover sit- and down- stays up to a few minutes in a puppy training class, but your dog can learn to stay for up to a half hour or more with practice. The "stay" command comes in handy when you need your dog to stay put while you go to answer the door or sit down to wrap holiday gifts.

COME

This command is very essential because it can save your dog's life someday. It is unavoidable that even with diligence, your dog will one day escape through the front door or side gate or slip out of its leash. Sometimes their curiosity draws them toward life-threatening situations, like oncoming traffic. When your dog is charging obviously toward danger, you want them to respond to your voice above all else.

DON'T TOUCH / LEAVE IT

Curious dogs will find enticing objects wherever they go. This command can help a dog stay safe if it becomes curious about a dangerous object that's not meant for them.

OFF

Off command is stopping your dog from jumping on people or climbing on furniture. This command is to calm your dogs on greetings and keep all four feet on the ground.

HEEL

It is hard when your dog pulls you down the street, especially if it's a big dog. Even the most enthusiastic dog should learn to pace himself to your speed in walking or jogging. There are many different training strategies you can use to teach your dog to walk by your side, and to stop and sit when you stop moving.
