Steven R. Fehrenbach

A Simple Soldier:

A Simple Soldier John Gess, 2008-08-30 This is the story of Sepp Scheibenzuber a simple man For most of his early life Sepp didnt make choices Choices were made for him At 13 he wanted to continue his schooling but his parents had other ideas and soon he was toiling on the farms of Bavaria Thereafter he knew nothing else and so continued working on the land until he was drafted into the German Army There was no question that he would go He had never heard of anyone even contemplating avoiding the draft And so within months he was fighting a war against Frenchman a people whom he knew little about other than the Nazis said they were evil And in the following years he fought the Russians and suffered almost unendurable depravation But somehow Sepp endured He obeyed He did what he was told along with millions of other Germans It never even entered his mind that he had an alternative All the choices were made for him except one He wanted to survive

Modernism and Mourning Patricia Rae, 2007 The essays in Modernism and Mourning examine the work of mourning in modernist literature or more precisely its propensity for resisting this work Drawing from recent developments in the theory and cultural history of mourning its contributors explore the various ways in which modernist writers repudiate Freud s famous injunction to mourners to work through their grief endorsing instead a resistant or melancholic mourning that shapes both their themes and their radical experiments with form The emerging picture of the pervasive influence of melancholic mourning in modernist literature casts new light on longstanding critical arguments especially those about the politics of modernism It also makes clear the pertinence of this literature to the present day in which the catastrophic losses of 9 11 of retaliatory war of racially motivated genocide of the AIDS epidemic have made the work of mourning a subject of widespread interest and debate Patricia Rae is Head of the Department of English at Queen s University
