

One sunlit afternoon, a young girl - illicitly bathing in a stream - first fell in love with a passing stranger. Her parents called her Dorcas, but he called her Campion and that's what she longed to be, then and forever.

So when an unbearable suitor is forced on her, she flees to seek her lover, taking with her the one gift left to her by her unknown father - a pendant of gold.

There are four of these jewels, each key to a secret, each owned by a stranger. When one person has them all, the holder will have access to great wealth and power. This is Campion's inheritance, one of peril and enchantment.

'Bernard Cornwell is a literary miracle... producing the most entertaining and readable historical novels of his generation.'
