

Goodbye Letter to Alcohol

Date _____

Dear Alcohol,

You have been the one constant in my life. I have never known a time when you weren't important to someone close to me or to me.

When I joined the dance with you, you appeared benign even helpful. You gave me confidence, made me bigger, louder, and funnier than the person I felt I was. But that relationship was also linked to my time with you and so when I stopped this relationship with _____ I knew I had to stay away from you too, at least until I had got over that one and could spend time with you and not miss them.

You grew angry at my withdrawal and would harp incessantly in my ear until I would relent and come back to you but the next day I would hate you and hate myself for giving in. This pull and push has gone on for _____ and now I
