

Primary Discourse

- Home
- Acquired naturally
- Basis of identity
- Used to make sense of the world and interact with others
- Is often influenced by socioeconomic status
- Students from marginalized communities and disadvantaged backgrounds have a harder time reconciling primary and dominant secondary Discourses

Secondary Discourse

- Public: School, Workplace, Community Organizations
- Usually taught through overt instruction (especially in school)
- Can only be acquired fluently through apprenticeships / enculturation
- Can be a dominant secondary Discourse, which brings money, power, and/or prestige
- Dominant Discourses have gatekeeping mechanisms to test fluent users and keep others out
- Can be in conflict with a primary discourse
- You are either fluent, or you are not a part of the discourse. There is no in-between.
