conceal each other, but allow a view from the interior across the building.⁵

The dating inscription runs around the outer face of the octagonal arcade (Fig. 4). Reading clockwise from the southeast corner, the text is divided into six sections by rosettes (Appendix 1). The first five are introduced by the invocation to God (basmala) and contain Qur'anic or pious texts. The final section, beginning on the east side and running across the south-east, contains the foundation text. It now reads, 'The servant of God, al-Ma'mūn, commander of the believers, built this dome, may God accept [it] from him and be pleased with him, in the year 72 [corresponding to 691–92]. Amen. Lord of the Worlds and praise to God,' but van Berchem showed that as a prise de possession in the 3rd/9th century the 'Abbāsid caliph al-Ma'mūn simply inserted his name in place of that of the Umayyad caliph 'Abd al-Malik.⁶

The foundation text conforms to the standard Umayyad formula with the name of the builder and his titles, a verb, the structure commissioned, and a date.⁷ Most authors have interpreted it as meaning that the building was finished

Jews, Christians, and the Abode of Islam Jacob Lassner,2020-03-04 One of the greatest authorities on medieval Islam sheds immensely stimulating new light on cross cultural relations in the Middle Ages Times Literary Supplement UK In Jews Christians and the Abode of Islam historian Jacob Lassner examines the relationship between the three Abrahamic faiths that defined their political and cultural interaction during the Middle Ages and continues to define them today Examining the debates taking place in modern Western scholarship on Islam Lassner sheds new light on the social and political status of medieval Jews and Christians in various Islamic lands from the seventh to the thirteenth century Using a vast array of primary sources Lassner balances the rhetoric of literary and legal texts from the Middle Ages with other newly discovered medieval sources that describe life as it was actually lived among the three faith communities Lassner demonstrates what medieval Muslims meant when they spoke of tolerance and how that abstract concept played out at different times and places in the Christian and Jewish communities under Islamic rule Finally he considers how this new understanding of medieval Islamic civilization might affect the highly contentious global environment of today Excavations at Tall Jawa, Jordan, Volume 4: The Early Islamic House Michèle Daviau,2009-11-23 Much of the archaeology of Late Antique period remains in Jordan has concentrated on public buildings churches mosques theatres baths and their major architectural features such as mosaic floors In this fourth report of the excavations at Tall Jawa in central Jordan a single house with a rich repertoire of pottery mould made lamps glass and a small coin hoard appears to span the transition period from the Late Byzantine to the Early Islamic period Details of the construction of the building itself and of its mosaic pavements the
