Assessing The Potential For Using Reserves In Operations Other Than War:

Assessing the Potential for Using Reserves in Operations Other Than War, 1997 The end of the cold war and demise of the Soviet Union left the United States as the only superpower Its new status conferred on it new responsibilities including requirements to lead and participate in global operations that require military forces but do not involve armed conflict Commonly referred to as Operations Other Than War or OOTW these operations span a range of activities including disaster relief humanitarian assistance and peacekeeping The frequency and diversity of these operations have taxed the capacity of active component AC forces and policymakers have looked to the reserve components RC both to lift some of the burden from the AC and to provide capabilities needed in OOTW This study analyzes how forces are selected for OOTW to determine how use of the RC may be affected It examines not only formal force selection procedures but also informal and potent influences that we call Service cultures Assessing the Potential for Using Reserves in Operations Other Than War Roger Allen Brown, United States. Department of Defense. Office of the Secretary of Defense, National Defense Research Institute (U.S.), Rand Corporation, 1997 The authors examine the joint planning process the criteria force providers use to select forces and the resource and institutional aspects of service cultures that contribute to or impede how and when reserves are employed Selected Rand Abstracts Rand Corporation, 1997 Includes publications previously listed in the supplements to the Index of selected publications of the Rand Corporation Oct 1962 Feb 1963 Military Organizations for Homeland Defense and Smaller-Scale Contingencies Kevin D. Stringer, 2006-10-30 History has often confirmed that it is not superior weapons but superior organizations that are the most effective factor in achieving military success In light of this consideration Kevin D Stringer s new work proposes how the U S military can best be restructured to conduct military operations other than war as they are known in doctrinal terms Such reform is central to meeting the demands of homeland defense and smaller scale contingencies including nation building and stability operations Foreign military formations present models for peace operations irregular warfare and other missions as well as counterterrorism law enforcement and border control The models considered drawn from tactical units in Britain Denmark Germany Israel Norway Rhodesia Russia and Switzerland are selected as best practice examples for transforming the U S Armed Forces for future missions both at home and abroad The author describes the categories of military operations other than war in the context of force structure requirements for homeland defense and irregular warfare Each chapter aligns foreign tactical organizations with these military operations to identify appropriate formations to enhance the U S Army This issue of future organizational structure is crucial to the debate over the Quadrennial Defense Review the Pentagon report to Congress on emerging threats and the future role of the National Guard Changes in existing force structure will have significant implications for the conduct of stabilization operations in Iraq and Afghanistan as well as responses by the active and Reserve components to domestic emergencies The Cumulative Book Index, 1998 A world list of books in the English language Equipping the Reserve Components of the Armed Services Roger Allen Brown,1997 This study researched service policies and procedures to establish a descriptive baseline of the way Reserve Components are to be equipped National Security in the Information Age Emily O. Goldman,2004-08-02 As the activities of individuals organizations and nations increasingly occur in cyberspace the security of those activities is becoming a growing concern Political economic and military leaders must manage and reduce the level of risk associated with threats from hostile states malevolent nonstate actors such as organized terrorist groups or individual hackers and high tech accidents The impact of the information technology revolution on warfare global stability governance and even the meaning of existing security constructs like deterrence is significant These essays examine the ways in which the information technology revolution has affected the logic of deterrence and crisis management definitions of peace and war democratic constraints on conflict the conduct of and military organization for war and the growing role of the private sector in providing security Meeting Peace Operations' Requirements While Maintaining MTW Readiness Jennifer M. Taw,David Persselin,Maren Leed,1998 Peace operations POs are arguably the military operations other than war most likely to stress the U S Army s ability to maintain combat readiness POs require a higher ratio of combat support combat service support units and special operations forces relative to combat arms units than do major theater wars MTWs smaller more tailored deployments training for some new tasks and more important for a more restrictive and sensitive operational environment and readier access to and more of some kinds of equipment such as crowd and riot control gear nonlethal weapons and vehicles At a time when the Army is shrinking changing its posture and participating in a rising number of both exercises and operational deployments its challenge is to both maintain MTW readiness its primary mission and meet the very different requirements of POs As long as MTWs remain the national priority and thus the Army s the Army can make some marginal changes to force structure training and doctrine that will help improve PO performance while also mitigating the effects of PO deployments on MTW readiness If POs become a higher priority and resources remain constrained the Army will have to trade off some MTW capabilities to better meet PO requirements These challenges must also be viewed in light of existing Army problems such as maintaining units at levels below normal strength and overestimating the readiness of the reserve component which transcend POs but are severely exacerbated by PO deployments Strategic Assessment (1997) Hans Binnendijk,Patrick L. Clawson,1997-10 This Assessment is aimed at policymakers analysts and members of the public who want a serious summary of the threats facing the U S in the next decade Contents major powers Russia Europe China Japan North America significant regional contingencies Persian Gulf Korean peninsula Arab Israel conflict India Pakistan proliferation troubled states Balkans Sub Saharan Africa Middle Eastern radicalism transnational problems international terrorism international crime refugees migration and population force structure threat assessment key military missions force structure Illustrated Educational Benefits and Officer-commissioning Opportunities Available to U.S. Military Servicemembers Michael R.
