BIRTH CHARTS

A birth chart is a snapshot of the heavens at the exact moment of your birth, but also, crucially, from your vantage point on Earth. The birth chart on the page opposite is my own birth chart. It shows how the heavens were ordered at the time of my birth (245a.m.) on May 4 1984 from my perspective in Rochford, England, where I was born.

A birth chart freezes time, putting you at the center and then arranging all the planets and signs around you in a circular map as they were positioned in the skies when you were born. Each sign and planet has a very different effect upon your life depending on where they are positioned in your chart.

There are many free online birth-chart calculators, but it's important to note that some are better than others (see page 112 for a few of my favorites). These require your date of birth, place of birth, and time of birth to be able to create your chart. To make sure you get an accurate birth chart, consider using two or three different calculators and compare the results.

If you don't know your time of birth, you can use a sunrise chart instead. Look up the time of the sunrise on the day and at the location you were born and use this as the time of birth when using an online birth-chart calculator. The chart that is drawn up will be less accurate, but it will still give you a good understanding of yourself and who you are.

Now you have your chart, it's time to learn how to interpret it.
