

When Vehicle passed over speed breaker then the vertical rack goes downward and upward by the help of springs. The rack forced to rotate the pinion then pinion transfer kinetic motion into the rotational motion, then pinion is connected to small pinion with help of this pinion is directly connect (stepper motor), when the rack pinion is downward and upward in motion our pinion also starts to rotate then small gears are connected beside the stepper motor (generator) to increase the speed, after small gears, is connected to the generator for converting mechanical energy into electrical energy, by using this mechanism kinetic energy is converted into electrical energy. There are no requirements of any fuel for this process. This experiment works for several types of roads, i.e., Street lights, charging points etc.

Fig3. Connection of assembly of prototype model

WORKING

This mechanism is based on assembly of following sequence of components: speed breaker (flexible solid bump), spring for repulsion, arrangement-rack pinion –small pinion arrangement-of gear box of stepper motor –rectifier – battery-street light.

The speed breaker which is connected over the rack and pinion works like flexible bump, when heavy object passed over the speed breaker, it will press and released downward and upward vertically by with help of springs. Rack and pinion which are connected between bump and shaft. They convert linear motion into the rotational motion. When pressure given over the bump then rack goes down vertically which forced to pinion for rotate. Then small pinion also rotates and coupled stepper motor gear starts to rotate the different thing of this module we decrease the gear ratio, mechanical energy converted to an electrical energy.

The stepper motor is used as a generator. The advantage of a stepper motor is a large induced voltage even at low rotational speeds also produces voltage during anti clock and clock wise direction, through stepper motor when our rack pinion goes upward it generating energy or also downward cycle also generating energy, this energy is AC form to convert this form of energy into DC we use the rectifier bridge and then this dc output will store in battery and use for several purposes.

ADVANTAGES

- Pollution of this energy is zero
 - Maintenance and installation cost is low
 - No manual work is required during the process
 - Fuel is not required for this system and fully economical
 - Area requirement for system is less
- External source is not required for power generation
