Grid Technologies M. P. Bekakos,George A.

Gravvanis, Hamid Arabnia, 2006 Grid computing denotes an approach to utilize distributed resources that are not subject to centralized control. This approach fulfills computing requirements arising within the context of current high performance computing applications especially in the field of computational science and engineering. This idea is analogous to an electric power network grid where power generators are distributed but the users are able to access electric power without bothering about the source of energy and its location. Current grid enabling technologies consist of stand alone architectures. A typical architecture provides middleware access to various services at different hierarchical levels. Computational grids enable the sharing, selection and aggregation of a wide variety of geographically distributed computational resources such as supercomputers, clusters of computers, storage systems, data sources, instruments, people etc and present them as a single unified resource for solving large scale computations and data intensive computing applications e.g. molecular modeling for drug design, brain activity analysis, high energy physics etc. Grid computing is a new emerging research area aiming to promote the development and advancement of technologies that provide seamless and scalable access to wide area distributed resources.

Information technologies are only at the dawn of a massive transformation and adaptation to the complex demands of the new upcoming information society. Nonetheless the editor hopes that the book can at least offer the first step into the convergence domain of information technologies and the reader will find it instructive and stimulating.
