Although shortsighted it is believed beavers can see colour. They also have a third, clear eyelid, (nictating membrane) which allows them to see underwater.

An excellent sense of hearing both on land and underwater allows them to identify predators and family. The inner ear is full of dense fluffy hairs which trap air and prevent water from getting in.

Beavers have 2 layers of fur. A short dense underfur which acts as an insulator and an outer layer of longer guard hairs which repel water.

Vital for finding food, identifying family members and detecting danger, a beaver's sense of smell is it's most important and one of its strongest senses.

With a lung capacity roughly 3 times that of an adult human beavers can remain underwater for up to 15 minutes at a time.
