Becoming Japanese The World Of The Pre School:

Becoming Japanese Joy Hendry, 1989-01-01 The children are more than mere pictures They tell us the truths about Japan So wrote a visitor to Japan at the turn of the century and this view underlies the title of this book The first few years of a child's life are vitally important for preparing it to be a member of the society to which it belongs Japanese methods of childcare are consequently directed towards taking advantage of the receptivity of the early years They are also different in many ways from Western methods and much of the colorful detail in this book will be of great interest to mothers everywhere from family beds and toilet training to the elaborate religious ceremonies of childhood Joy Hendry looks at customs and traditions at rewards and punishments and at the day to day life of children at home at school and in the wider world Joy Hendry's research involved working with Japanese mothers and other care takers and with kindergartens and day nurseries She has drawn on the work of sociologists psychologists and educationalists in English and Japanese but the theoretical framework for the study is drawn from social anthropology

Bodies as Sites of Cultural Reflection in Early Childhood Education Rachael S. Burke, Judith Duncan, 2014-10-30 Taking the body as a locus for discussion Rachael S Burke and Judith Duncan argue not only that implicit cultural practices shape most of the interactions taking place in early childhood curricula and pedagogy but that many of these practices often go unnoticed or unrecognized as being pedagogy Current scholars inspired by Foucault acknowledge that the body is socially and culturally produced and historically situated it is simultaneously a part of nature and society as well as a representation of the way that nature and society can be conceived Every natural symbol originating from the body contains and conveys a social meaning and every culture selects its own meaning from the myriad of potential body symbolisms Bodies as Sites of Cultural Reflection in Early Childhood

Education uses empirical examples from qualitative fieldwork conducted in New Zealand and Japan to explore these theories and discuss the ways in which children's bodies represent a central focus in teachers' pedagogical discussions and create contexts for the embodiment of children's experiences in the early years Shaped by Japanese Music Jay Davis

Keister, 2004-06 This study situates musical analysis in the context of its creation demonstrating that traditional Japanese music is an active socio-cultural system that has been reproduced in Japan from the seventeenth century to the present day

Women and Family in Contemporary Japan Susan D. Holloway, 2010-05-24 Japanese women singled out for their commitment to the role of housewife and mother are now postponing marriage and bearing fewer children Japan has become one of the least fertile and fastest aging countries in the world Why are so many Japanese women opting out of family life To answer this question the author draws on in-depth interviews and extensive survey data to examine Japanese mothers' perspectives and experiences of marriage parenting and family life The goal is to understand how as introspective self-aware individuals these women interpret and respond to the barriers and opportunities afforded within the structural and ideological contexts of contemporary Japan The findings suggest a need for changes in the structure of the workplace and the education system to provide women with the opportunity to find a fulfilling balance of work and family life

Life in a Japanese Women's College Brian J. McVeigh, 2013-09-13 One third of the Japanese female workforce are office ladies and their training takes place in the many women's junior colleges. Office ladies are low wage, low status secretaries who have little or no job security. Brian J. McVeigh draws on his experience as a teacher at one such institution to explore the cultural and social processes used to promote femininity in Japanese women. His detailed and ethnographically informed study considers how the students of these institutions are socialized to fit their future dual roles of employees and mothers and illuminates the sociopolitical role that the colleges play in Japanese society as a whole. An Emerging Non-Regular Labour Force in Japan Huiyan Fu, 2013-03-01 Like many industrialised nations, the current employment trend in Japan centres on diversification of the labour market with an increased use of temporary labour. Among a wide range of non-regular labour arrangements, haken are a newly legalised category of non-regular workers who are typically employed by the employment agency while working at the facilities of and being under the authority of the client firm. They have recently expanded exponentially under the state's deregulation policy and assumed considerable significance in political debate, especially with regard to the nation's widening gaps known as kakusa. This is the first anthropological study of haken and temporary agency work (TAW) in Japan, which combines both macro and micro level analyses. At the macro level, haken are explored from a historical perspective with a view to showing the changing state policy and public perception of haken. At the micro level, how TAW is experienced by real people in concrete situations is extremely varied and complex, often depending on intersecting structural variables including gender, age and class. The book therefore provides insight into the gap between powerful discourses and everyday life, as well as a better understanding of personhood in Japan's shifting landscape of employment. This book will be of interest to students and scholars of Japanese Studies, Japanese Business, Asian Business and Asian Anthropology.
