

developments in the relevant areas. During the last few years, strategic human resource management especially has emerged as an important stream in the HRM literature and has considerably enriched the study of IJVs. However, it must be noted in the book's favour that there is a dearth of research on the operations of IJVs in East Asia, despite the increasing importance of business activity in this region. This volume partially fills this gap by publishing a number of pioneering papers intended to lay the basis for further research. It would be a valuable companion for researchers and practising managers who wish to be better informed on this important subject. Overall, this book does make a contribution to the study of IJVs in one of the most vital regions in the world.

The Asia-Australian survey 1996-97

Melbourne: Macmillan, 632 pp, ISBN 1322-431-X, $95 (hardback)

Trood and McNamara's work is an impressive collection of data, statistics, reports, addresses, contacts, references, readings, general and specific information on all Asian countries. The book is divided into three parts: some overall themes as an introduction, the detailed description of all important countries in Asia forming the essential part of the book, and a reference section. With over 400 pages, the 'Countries of Asia' chapter is the main part of the book; it is divided into two sections. The first reviews a number of countries in detail, while the second part provides short profiles of the other countries. Unfortunately, the authors do not explain the criteria used for selection: why, for example, Laos (4.7 million people) or Cambodia (10 million people) are in the main section, while Bangladesh (117.8 million people) or Pakistan (126.3 million people) are in the second. Membership or non-membership of APEC was not used—Brunei although an APEC member is in the 'not important' second category—nor was ASEAN membership. In politics, size matters and to assign 2½ pages to countries with well above 100 million inhabitants, while giving details about countries with less than a tenth of their population seems unjustified.

The crucial issue in 'The year in review' is the discussion of Australia's relationship to Asia. While politicians might discuss Australia's position to Asian countries, in the sphere of business, numbers speak. Asia accounted for 50% of Australia's merchandise trade in 1995. Australia's biggest trading partners in Asia are Japan, South Korea, China, Singapore, Taiwan and Hong Kong, and Japan was Australia's largest recipient of service exports in 1993-94. While quoting Bob Hawke's statement 'instead of seeking security against Asia, [Australia] should seek security in and with Asia', the issue of security seems somewhat overemphasized throughout the book. Looking at the information presented in Trood and McNamara's book, the key link of Australia to Asia seems less reliant on military or cultural closeness than on steadily increasing economic relationship. With the end of the Cold War, military issues

The Engaging State John Spoehr, Purnendra Jain, 2012 The global financial crisis has highlighted the critical importance of Australia's engagement with the United States and the industrialising giants of Asia. In particular, Australia's exports to China and India have helped to insulate the nation from some of the worst consequences of the downturn elsewhere in the world. Increasingly, sub-national governments such as South Australia's are engaging directly with the region in an attempt to strengthen economic ties. The Engaging State shines a light on emerging forms of engagement in the Asia Pacific century.

OECD Economic Surveys: Australia 1998 OECD, 1998-01-08 This 1998 edition of OECD's periodic economic reviews of Australia examines recent economic developments, policies and prospects. It includes special features on corporate governance and entrepreneurship.

Australia's Relations with China David Fitzsimmons, 2022-09-08 Drawing on a wealth of interviews with more than fifty key stakeholders from Australia and China, including five former Australian Prime Ministers, Fitzsimmons presents a history and analysis of Australian-Chinese relations since 1972. Fitzsimmons systematically examines how Canberra formulates and implements Australia's China policy and how PMs and key influencers have made that policy over the last fifty years. Next, it analyses the style, manner and effectiveness of Australian Prime Ministers and other key foreign policy makers in making Australian policy on China. Next, it charts how Australian policy on China has changed over different political periods. It also highlights Australian policy to China as a global case study for other countries who are closely examining and learning lessons from how one Asia-Pacific middle power has dealt with the Chinese colossus. An essential guide for students of Australia's international relations as well as for scholars of international relations more broadly.

OECD Economic Surveys: Australia 1999 OECD, 1998-12-18 This 1999 edition of OECD's periodic economic reviews of Australia includes special features on structural reform and population ageing.

Re-Orienting Australia-China Relations Nicholas Thomas, 2017-03-02 Drawing on contributors from academic and policy communities, this volume explores the major aspects of Australia-China relations. The frequently overlooked connection between Australia and Taiwan is also considered to allow readers to reach a full appreciation of the restraints engendered by the relationship with China as well as its many benefits. Moving beyond the traditional state-centric analysis, the work incorporates new material on sub-state relations as well as examining the impact of global economic and social forces on the Australia-China friendship. In addition to providing a contemporary understanding of the bilateral ties, this work also provides a benchmark against which Australia's other relations with the countries of East Asia can be measured.

China's Rise - Threat or Opportunity? Herbert S. Yee, 2010-10-15 The phenomenal growth of Chinese economic and military power in the first decade of the 21st century has drawn world-wide attention. Perceptions of China's rise have shifted from seeing China as a threat to a more mixed view where China is seen as playing a key role in economic recovery taking an increasingly responsible role in world affairs and contributing significantly to scientific and technological advances This book argues that China will only become a truly global power when its rising power status is accepted or at least tolerated by other major powers and China's neighbours Filling a major gap in the existing literature it presents a comprehensive overview of how China's rise is perceived in a wide range of countries and regions these include China's neighbours other world powers the parts of China not part of mainland China Taiwan Hong Kong and Macau and regions of the world where China is having an unexpected impact such as the Middle East It also examines changing perceptions of China in the western media Overall the book demonstrates that whilst many countries and regions are much more positive about China's rise than they were before considerable nervousness and concern persists

Handbook of Markets and Economies: East Asia, Southeast Asia, Australia, New Zealand Anthony Pecotich, Clifford J Shultz, 2016-07-22 East and Southeast Asia is a vast and complex region Its countries have a bewildering array of histories demographics economic structures cultural backgrounds and global marketing potential This Handbook unravels the mystery Each chapter is written by a country specialist and provides a thorough and up to date analysis of one of the ESEA countries Each author follows a consistent model and covers geography and natural resources the political system the economic system the social system and the marketing environment Complete chapters are devoted to Australia Brunei Cambodia China and Hong Kong East Timor Indonesia Japan Korea North and South Laos Malaysia Myanmar New Zealand Papua New Guinea the Philippines Singapore Taiwan Thailand and Vietnam Not just a review of current conditions the Handbook offers prognoses for future marketing and commercial activity in each country This definitive resource is generously illustrated with maps figures and tables and includes comprehensive references and source materials for each country It is an essential reference for students researchers and practitioners in the global economy

Facing North Volume 2 David Goldsworthy, Peter Edwards, 2015-03-02 Facing North is the first substantial history of Australia's relations with Asia since Federation Volume 1 2001 chronicles Australian Asian relations from 1901 to the 1970s Volume 2 now carries the story through the last decades of the century Both make extensive use of official government sources and of the private collections of ministers and public servants This volume discusses the changing relations between Australia and Asia in the period from the 1970s to 2000 Over this time integration became a dominant theme as Australia looked increasingly to its near neighbours to form political social and economic alliances An important driving force behind this direction was the economic opportunities presented by Asia At the same time Australia championed the rights of Asian countries to self determination economic development and an independent role in international affairs The book combines the discussion of broad policy themes with detailed analysis of policy making in relation to particular issues such as human rights and episodes such as the crisis in East Timor At home a key concern was the question of difference between Australian and Asian values As Australia began accepting significant numbers of immigrants from the region the country's national identity and the extent to which it identified with Asia became matters of intense debate. Australian society itself has changed as a result. Facing North is essential reading for anyone who wants to better understand Australia's present relations with Asian countries and our future choices.
