Aging, Its Complex Management Ronald Cape, 1978 Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), 1979
Includes subject section name section and 1968 1970 technical reports Changes in Sensory Motor Behavior in Aging
A.-M. Ferrandez, N. Teasdale, 1995-12-11 Recently studies on aging processes and age related changes in behavior have been expanding considerably probably due to the dramatic changes observed in the demographics This increase in the overall age and proportion of elderly people has heightened the severity of problems associated with the safety and well being of elderly persons in everyday life Many researchers working on motor control have thus focused more intensely on the effects of age on motor control This new avenue of research has led to programs for alleviating or delaying the specific sensory motor limitations encountered by the elderly e g falls in an attempt to make the elderly more autonomous The aggregation of studies from different perspectives is often fascinating especially when the same field can serve as a common ground between researchers Nearly all contributors to this book work on sensory motor aging they represent a large range of affiliations and backgrounds including psychology neurobiology cognitive sciences kinesiology neuropsychology neuropharmacology motor performance physical therapy exercise science and human development Addressing age related behavioral changes can also furnish some crucial reflections in the debate about motor coordination aging is the product of both maturational and environmental processes and studies on aging must determine how the intricate interrelationships between these processes evolve The study of aging makes it possible to determine how compensatory mechanisms operating on different subsystems and each aging at its own rate compensate for biological degenerations and changing external demands This volume will contribute to demonstrating that the study of the aging process raises important theoretical questions Annual Review of Gerontology and Geriatrics, Volume 4, 1984, 1984-01-15 The key to preventing many adult diseases lies in childhood when lifetime patterns of diet exercise and moderation are most often set Authored by an interdisciplinary team including nurses psychologists nutritionists and researchers this book provides a research based examination of the interplay between health and behavior in childhood and adolescence leading to either positive or negative health outcomes It examines issues such as What role does temperament play in at risk behavior How can we improve dietary choices How can we reduce the cycle of physical inactivity leading to obesity What makes some children more prone to substance abuse This book provides a long range perspective on health promotion by examining its roots in the early years of life Clinical Pharmacology & Therapeutics Paul Turner, C. Padgham, Alan Hedges, 1980-06-18 Cognitive and Behavioral Performance Factors in Atypical Aging Mark L. Howe, Michael J. Stones, Charles J. Brainerd, 2012-12-06 It is a truism that as we age there are a number of underlying physiological changes conspiring to alter our level of behavioral and cognitive function ing Despite the inherent interrelatedness of these behavioral and cognitive changes all too often the papers we read confine themselves to specific isolated components of the developing process Although exceptions nat urally exist we believe that these exceptions should become rule Although an integrated approach is important in all areas of adult development it is perhaps particularly germane in the study of atypical aging Here changes in overall functioning can occur in rapid succession with the synchrony of decline between different subprocesses making it difficult to factor changes in one process from changes in another For example because changes in cognitive functioning co occur with other dramatic changes in motoric response capacities it is unclear how one can effectively study changes in the ability to cognize independent of changes in the very mechanisms ability to execute motor sequences so often used to index cognitive performance

Embracing the Other Pearl Oliner, Samuel P. Oliner, Lawrence Baron, Lawrence Blum, 1995-07 All but buried for most of the twentieth century the concept of altruism has re emerged in this last quarter as a focus of intense scholarly inquiry and general public interest In the wake of increased consciousness of the human potential for destructiveness both scholars and the general public are seeking interventions which will not only inhibit the process but may in fact chart a new creative path toward a global community Largely initiated by a group of pioneering social psychologists early questions on altruism centered on its motivation and development primarily in the context of contrived laboratory experiments Although publications on the topic have been considerable over the last several years and now represent the work of representatives from many disciplines of inquiry this volume is distinguished from others in several ways Embracing the Other emerged primarily as a response to recent research on an extraordinary manifestation of real life altruism namely to recent studies of non Jewish rescuers of Jews during World War II It is the work of a multi disciplinary and international group of scholars including philosophers social psychologists historians sociologists and educators challenging several prevailing conceptual definitions and motivational sources of altruism The book combines both new empirical and historical research as well as theoretical and philosophical approaches and includes a lengthy section addressing the practical implications of current thinking on altruism for society at large The result is a multi textured work addressing critical issues in varied disciplines while centered on shared themes
