of a brandy and seltzer We got on very well together and I soon gathered from what my new acquaintance said that though he belonged to one of the best families in Cornwall he had been an English merchant in Haiti and had made his money chiefly in the coffee trade He was a widower I learned incidentally and his daughters had been brought up for some years in England though at their mother s request they had also passed part of their lives in convent schools in Paris and Rouen Mrs Vivian was a Haitian you know he said casually Catholic of course The girls are Catholics They re good girls though they re my own daughters and C sarine your friend of last night is supposed to be clever I m no judge myself I don t know about it Oh by the way C sarine said she hadn t thanked you half enough herself yesterday and I was to be sure and bring you round this afternoon to a cup of tea with us at Seymour Crescent In spite of the impression Mdlle C sarine had made upon me the night before I somehow didn t feel at all desirous of meeting her again I was impressed it is true but not favourably There seemed to me something uncanny and weird about her which made me shrink from seeing anything more of her if I could possibly avoid it And as it happened I was luckily engaged that very afternoon to tea at Irene s I made the excuse and added somewhat pointedly on purpose that it might be repeated to Mdlle C sarine Miss Latham is a very old and particular friend of mine a friend whom I couldn t for worlds think of disappointing
