Britains New Royal Air Force:

Royal Air Force Quarterly and Commonwealth Air Forces Journal, 1942 The American Eagle Squadrons of the Royal Air Force Timothy S. Good, 2020-04-16 While the United States sought to remain neutral in the early years of World War II some Americans did not. This book is the first to provide the operational records and combat reports of the three American Eagle Royal Air Force squadrons units comprised of volunteer American pilots who served with the British prior to the U S entering the war. The records tell the story of the more than 200 pilots who against federal law flew with the British in their fight against Nazi Germany. While some Americans served individually in other RAF units these three squadrons the 71st 121st and 133rd were the only ones organized exclusively for Americans. They were the first of dozens of American fighter squadrons that would soar over Europe.

The RAF in the Battle of France and the Battle of Britain Greg Baughen, 2017-09-15 In May 1940 the opposing German and Allied forces seemed reasonably well matched. On the ground the four allied nations had more troops artillery and tanks. Even in the air the German advantage in numbers was slight. Yet two months later the Allied armies had been crushed. The Netherlands Belgium and France had all surrendered and Britain stood on her own facing imminent defeat. Subsequent accounts of the campaign have tended to see this outcome as predetermined with the seeds of defeat sown long before the fighting began. Was it so inevitable? Should the RAF have done more to help the Allied armies? Why was such a small proportion of the RAF s frontline strength committed to the crucial battle on the ground? Could Fighter Command have done more to protect the British and French troops being evacuated from the beaches of Dunkirk? This study looks at the operations flown and takes a fresh look at the fatal decisions made behind the scenes decisions that unnecessarily condemned RAF aircrews to an unequal struggle and ultimately ensured Allied defeat. What followed became the RAF s finest hour with victory achieved by the narrowest of margins. Or was it as some now suggest a victory that was always inevitable? If so how was the German military juggernaut that had conquered most of Europe so suddenly halted? This study looks at the decisions and mistakes made by both sides. It explains how the British obsession with bomber attacks on cities had led to the development of the wrong type of fighter force and how only a fortuitous sequence of events enabled Fighter Command to prevail. It also looks at how ready the RAF was to deal with an invasion. How much air support could the British Army have expected? Why were hundreds of American combat planes and experienced Polish and Czech pilots left on the sidelines? And when the Blitz began and Britain finally got the war it was expecting what did this campaign tell us about the theories on air power that had so dominated pre war air policy? All these questions and more are answered in Greg Baughen s third book. Baughen describes the furious battles between the RAF and the Luftwaffe and the equally bitter struggle between the Air Ministry and the War Office and explains how close Britain really came to defeat in the summer of 1940.

The Royal Air Force in American Skies Tom Killebrew, 2015-10-15 By early 1941 the war raged in Europe and Great Britain stood alone against the aerial might of Nazi Germany. Although much of the Royal Air Force's pilot training program had been relocated to Canada and other Dominion countries the need for pilots remained acute. The British looked to the United States for possible assistance. Passage of the Lend Lease Act in March 1941 allowed for the training of British pilots in the United States and the formation of British Flying Training Schools. These unique schools were owned by American operators staffed with American civilian instructors supervised by British Royal Air Force officers. Aircraft supplied by the U.S. Army Air Corps and used the RAF training syllabus. Within these pages Tom Killebrew provides the first comprehensive history of all seven British Flying Training Schools located in Terrell, Texas; Lancaster, California; Miami, Oklahoma; Mesa, Arizona; Clewiston, Florida; Ponca City, Oklahoma; and Sweetwater, Texas. The first British students arrived in a still neutral United States in June 1941. Many had never been in an airplane or even driven an automobile but they mastered the elements of flight. Ground school classes were introduced to the mysteries of the Link trainer and instrument flight and then ventured out on cross-country exercises. Students began night flying with the natural apprehension associated with taking off into a black sky aided by only a few instruments: a flickering flare path and limited ground references. Some students failed the periodic check flights and had to be eliminated from training while others were killed during mishaps and are buried in local cemeteries. Those who finished the course became Royal Air Force pilots. But the story of the British Flying Training Schools is more than the story of young men learning to fly. These young British students would also forge a strong and long-lasting bond of friendship with the Americans they came to know. This bond would last not only during training but would continue throughout the war and still exist long after the end of the war.

The Royal Air Force in Texas Tom Killebrew, 2003. With the outbreak of World War II, British RAF officials sought to train aircrews outside of England, safe from enemy attack and poor weather. In the USA, six civilian flight schools dedicated themselves to instructing RAF pilots. Tom Killebrew explores the history of the Terrell Aviation School. Marshal of the Royal Air Force Sir Charles Portal Richard Michael Milburn, 2024-03-08. Charles Frederick Algernon Portal was born in Hungerford, England, in 1893. One of seven brothers, Portal developed a fierce competitive streak and a steely determination from an early age. Known by all who knew him as Peter Portal, he enlisted in the Army at the outbreak of the First World War as a dispatch rider, being mentioned in General French's very first dispatch. Portal's abilities were quickly recognized and he gained a commission in short order. It was in the air that Portal saw his future and he subsequently transferred to the Royal Flying Corps initially as an observer before training as a pilot. In this latter role, Portal proved a courageous and instinctive leader, garnering the rare accolade of a DSO and Bar for his wartime service. His meteoric rise continued in the inter-war period and when Hitler's forces invaded Poland, Portal had already ascended to the Air Force Board. He then took the RAF's top command post at Bomber Command during the battles of France and Britain before replacing Cyril Newall as Chief of Air Staff, aged just 47, in October 1940. Charles Portal was, in General Eisenhower's words, Britain's greatest wartime leader, including Churchill. Portal was a strategist, a diplomat, and an outstanding leader of the RAF in the Second World War. He built productive and enduring relationships with the most powerful Allied leaders some of which including Churchill Bomber Harris and Hap Arnold are explored here Portal helped direct the UK's strategy from the darkest days of 1940 through to Allied victory in 1945 He never lost his calm even under the most extreme pressure and approached the war with a cool logic that defied the chaos of the day Despite his enormous achievements and being showered with post war accolades Portal is little known today His historical anonymity is a reflection of his disinterest in his own legacy He neither kept wartime diaries nor penned an egotistical autobiography to cash in on his post war fame He retired as he had served with dignity and humility traits that made him particularly influential with American allies As Wing Commander Rich Milburn reveals in this long overdue second biography Charles Portal was a hero in every sense a heroic battlefield leader in one global conflict and one of the men most directly responsible for Allied victory in a second International Warbirds John C.
