British Shipbuilding And The State Since 1918:

British Shipbuilding and the State Since 1918 Lewis Johnman, Hugh Murphy, 2002 Few industries attest to the decline of Britain's political and economic power as does British shipbuilding in its near disappearance in the course of the twentieth century On the eve of the First World War British shipbuilding produced more than the rest of the world put together But by the 1980s the industry which had dominated world markets and underpinned British maritime power accounted for less than one per cent of world output Throughout this decline a remarkable relationship developed between the shipbuilding industry and the Government as both sought to restore the fortunes and dominance of this once great enterprise This book is the first to provide an industry analysis of this period based on the full breadth of primary sources available It blends the records of central Government with those of the Shipbuilding Employers federation and the Shipbuilding Conference as well as records from individual yards technical societies and the trade press

Shipbuilding and Ship Repair Workers around the World Raquel Varela, Hugh Murphy, Marcel Linden, 2025-10-01 Maritime trade is the backbone of the world's economy Around ninety percent of all goods are transported by ship and since World War II shipbuilding has undergone major changes in response to new commercial pressures and opportunities Early British dominance for example was later undermined in the 1950s by competition from the Japanese who have since been overtaken by South Korea and most recently China The case studies in this volume trace these and other important developments in the shipbuilding and ship repair industries as well as workers responses to these historic transformations

Bridging the Seas Larrie D. Ferreiro, 2020-01-21 How the introduction of steam iron and steel required new rules and new ways of thinking for the design and building of ships In the 1800s shipbuilding moved from sail and wood to steam iron and steel The competitive pressure to achieve more predictable ocean transportation drove the industrialization of shipbuilding as shipowners demanded ships that enabled tighter scheduling improved performance and safe delivery of cargoes In Bridging the Seas naval historian Larrie Ferreiro describes this transformation of shipbuilding portraying the rise of a professionalized naval architecture as an integral part of the Industrial Age Picking up where his earlier book Ships and Science left off Ferreiro explains that the introduction of steam iron and steel required new rules and new ways of thinking for designing and building ships The characteristics of performance had to be first measured then theorized Ship theory led to the development of quantifiable standards that would ensure the safety and quality required by industry and governments and this in turn led to the professionalization of naval architecture as an engineering discipline Ferreiro describes among other things the technologies that allowed greater predictability in ship performance theoretical developments in naval architecture regarding motion speed and power

Called the greatest game of all by its supporters but often overlooked by the cultural mainstream no sport is more identified with England's northern working class than rugby league This book traces the story of the sport from the Northern Union of the 1900s to the formation of the Super League in the 1990s through war depression boom and deindustrialisation into a new economic and social age Using a range of previously unexplored archival sources this extremely readable and deeply researched book considers the impact of two world wars the significance of the game's expansion to Australasia and the momentous decision to take rugby league to Wembley It investigates the history of rugby union's long running war against league and the sport's troubled relationship with the national media Most importantly this book sheds new light on issues of social class and working class masculinity regional identity and the profound impact of the decline of Britain's traditional industries For all those interested in the history of sport and working class culture this is essential reading From East of Suez to the Eastern Atlantic Edward Hampshire,2016-04-15

Exploring British naval policy during the first two governments of Harold Wilson 1964-70 this book analyses how the Navy Department of the Ministry of Defence and the Navy's professional leadership dealt with six years of defence reviews retrenchment and strategic re-orientation This period witnessed a dramatic blow to the service's self image and self confidence as a result of the cancellation of the large CVA 01 aircraft carrier and a gradual process of realignment reorientation and adaptation to the changed political environment resulting in a recovery of self confidence a new strategy and the approval in principle of a class of small aircraft carriers Taking advantage of the recently released official records the study highlights for the first time just how in practice Mountbatten managed to dominate the Chiefs of Staff machinery and how his power was undermined and diminished It also demonstrates that contrary to widespread historical opinion Denis Healey was not necessarily set against carrier air power from his arrival in office and was willing to consider the procurement of a medium carrier for the navy Furthermore the work highlights the importance of the Mediterranean in the rehabilitation and renewal of self confidence by the navy in the late 1960s Although focusing primarily on policy and strategic matters the book incorporates wider historical consideration reviewing other factors that influenced policy making such as foreign policy financial resources materiel manpower and recruitment in addition to the administrative machinery and the cultural environment of the time In so doing Dr Hampshire offers a vivid insight into the interactions of government and military at a critical juncture in the changing nature of Britain's global role Extreme Economies Richard Davies,2020-01-14 A New Statesman best book of the year New York Times Editors Choice pick A Financial Times best economics book of 2019 An accessible story driven look at the future of the global economy written by a leading expert To predict our future we must look to the extremes So argues the economist Richard Davies who takes readers to the margins of the modern economy and beyond in his globe trotting book From a prison in rural

Louisiana where inmates purchase drugs with prepaid cash cards to the poorest major city on earth where residents buy clean water in plastic bags from the world's first digital state to a prefecture in Japan whose population is the oldest in the world how these extreme economies function most often well outside any official oversight offers a glimpse of the forces that underlie human resilience drive societies to failure and will come to shape our collective future While the people who inhabit these places have long been dismissed or ignored Extreme Economies revives a foundational idea from medical science to turn the logic of modern economics on its head arguing that the outlier economies are the place to learn about our own future Whether following Punjabi migrants through the lawless Panamanian jungle or visiting a day care for the elderly modeled after a casino Davies brings a storyteller's eye to places where the economy has been destroyed distorted and even turbocharged In adapting to circumstances that would be unimaginable to most of us the people he encounters along the way have helped to pioneer the economic infrastructure of the future At once personal and keenly analytical Extreme Economies is an epic travelogue for the age of global turbulence shedding light on today's most pressing economic questions
