Electing Our Masters Jon Lawrence, 2009-03-26 In this engagingly written history of electioneering in Britain from the eighteenth century to the present Jon Lawrence explores the changing relationship between politicians and public Throughout this period he argues British politics has been characterized by bruising public rituals intended to bestow legitimacy on politicians by obliging them to face an often irreverent public on broadly equal terms Face to face interaction was central both to the disorderly civic rituals of eighteenth century politics and to the Victorian and Edwardian election meeting Perhaps surprisingly it also survived in pretty rude health between the wars despite the emergence of the new mass communication media of radio and cinema But the same cannot be said of the post war era and the rise of television Today most politicians are content merely to offer the semblance of meaningful engagement walkabouts canvassing and meetings are all designed to ensure that most senior politicians come into contact only with the smiling faces of that dwindling band the party faithful Lloyd George and Churchill might have relished the rough and tumble of a tumultuous public meeting but their modern counterparts tend to be more risk averse and not without reason given that the cameras are always present to capture their mishaps But this is not another nostalgic lament for a lost golden age On the contrary Electing Our Masters argues that politicians frequently still crave the kudos to be derived from bruising encounters with an irreverent public hence Tony Blair's so called masochism strategy in the 2005 election campaign with its succession of gruelling sessions before live studio audiences As Lawrence points out the vital question for today is can we persuade our broadcasters that such encounters must form a staple of modern mediated politics

Comparative Political Finance in the 1980s Herbert E. Alexander, Joel Federman, 1989-08-25 Investigates the problems common to democracies seeking to regulate uses of money in election campaigns and to a lesser extent considers the role of public funding

The Geography of English Politics R. J. Johnston, 2014-10-03 This book illustrates the degree of variability in voting behaviour within social groups and suggests reasons for that variability It reviews and critiques conventional analyses and presents statistical analyses of the geography of voting in England The book reveals that substantial geographical variations exist in the widely held generalisations such as that white collar owner occupiers favour the Conservatives or that blue collar council tenants prefer Labour
