O'Malley

British Television The Formative Years:

The Birth of British Television Mark Aldridge, 2017-09-16 When the BBC launched the world's first regular high definition television service on 2 November 1936 it was the culmination of decades of technological innovations. More than this, however, the service meant that the principle of television had finally found its place. The Birth of British Television A History traces the early history and development of television from the experiments of amateurs to the institutionalised developments that led to the world's first regular high definition television service. Author Mark Aldridge provides a clear, in-depth and accessible introduction for those either exploring the period for the first time or seeking new insights into the beginnings of the industry. In tracing the origins and development of television, Aldridge focuses on a number of important factors, including the attitude of the press towards early television and examines the way that expectations of television changed over time prior to its official launch. Utilising new research, this illuminating study examines how the aims for a new television service developed and the extent to which content and technology were linked. The Birth of British Television approaches this formative period from several perspectives, from private individuals to the BBC and government, while also examining the broader opinions at the time towards the new medium through press reports and feedback from the general public. Also included is an assessment of early programming which helps to offer a new and profound evaluation of the development of early television. Mark Aldridge is a Lecturer in Film and TV Studies at Southampton Solent University, UK. He specialises in British television and both film and television history. His previous publications include T is for Television 2008, an analysis of the work of Russell T Davies, co-written with Andy Murray.

Playing Gay in the Golden Age of British TV Stephen Bourne, 2019-11-22 The television set, the humble box in the corner of almost every British household, has brought about some of the biggest social changes in modern times. It gives us a window into the lives of people who are different from us: different classes, different races, different sexualities. And through this window, we've learnt that perhaps we're not so different after all. Playing Gay in the Golden Age of British TV looks at gay male representation on and off the small screen, from the programmes that hinted at homoeroticism to Mary Whitehouse's Clean Up TV campaign and The Naked Civil Servant to the birth of Channel 4 as an exciting alternative television channel. Here, acclaimed social historian Stephen Bourne tells the story of the innovation, experimentation, backtracking and bravery that led British television to help change society for the better.

British Television R. W. Burns, 1986 This book is concerned with the history of British television for home reception from 1922-23 to 1939, when the London Station closed down for the war years. Great care has been taken to ensure that an unbiased, accurate history has been written, and the work is based predominantly on written primary source material.

Television R. W. Burns, 1998 This book presents a balanced, thorough history of television to 1940, considering the factors, technical, financial and social, which influenced and led to the establishment of many of the world's high definition TV broadcasting services. This is a major book in the study of history of science, technology and media.

Gender and Early

Television Sarah Arnold,2021-05-20 Between the nineteenth century and the mid twentieth century television transformed from an idea to an institution In Gender and Early Television Sarah Arnold traces women s relationship to the new medium of television across this period in the UK and USA She argues that women played a crucial role in its development both as producers and as audiences long before the golden age of television in the 1950s Beginning with the emergence of media entertainment in the mid nineteenth century and culminating in the rise of the post war television industries Arnold claims that all along the way women had a stake in television As keen consumers of media women also helped promote television to the public by performing as television girls Women worked as directors producers technical crew and announcers It seemed that television was open to women However as Arnold shows the increasing professionalisation of television resulted in the segregation of roles Production became the sphere of men and consumption the sphere of women While this binary has largely informed women s role in television through her analysis Arnold argues that it has not always been the case

Television before TV Anne-Katrin Weber,2025-10-01 Television before TV rethinks the history of interwar television by exploring the medium s numerous demonstrations organized at national fairs and international exhibitions in the late 1920s and 1930s Building upon extensive archival research in Britain Germany and the United States Anne Katrin Weber analyses the sites where the new medium met its first audiences She argues that public displays offered spaces where television s symbolic cultural political and social definitions were negotiated and eventually stabilized for the historian the exhibitions therefore constitute crucial events to understand not only the medium s pre war emergence but also its subsequent domestication in the post war years Designed as a transnational study her book highlights the multiple circulations of artefacts and ideas across borders of democratic and totalitarian regimes alike Richly illustrated with 100 photographs Television before TV finally emphasizes that even without regular programmes interwar television was widely seen

Broadcasting in the UK and US in the 1950s Jamie Medhurst,Siân Nicholas,Thomas O'Malley,2016-05-11 In an age of digital communications where radio satellite television and computing have come together to allow instant access to information and entertainment from around the globe it is sometimes easy to overstate the break with the recent past that these developments imply However from a historical perspective it is important to recognise that the national dimensions of communications including broadcasting have always been framed within different sets of international political economic cultural and technological relationships Television so easily seen as the last technology to succumb to the effects of internationalisation subsequent to the technical and political changes of the late twentieth century was in fact from the outset embedded in international interactions In recent years a focus has been placed on the longstanding sets of transnational relationships in place in the years after World War II when television established itself as the dominant form of mass communication in Europe and America Recent research has adopted a comparative approach to television history which has examined the interactions within Europe and between Europe and America from the 1950s onwards In addition there has been increasing interest in the idea of television in the Anglophone world looking at transatlantic interactions from the early phases of the development of the technology through the growing market for formats in the 1950s and onwards to connections with Australia and Hong Kong in these years The essays in this collection contribute to this area by bringing together in one volume work which focuses on both national developments in UK and US broadcasting in the 1950s to allow for reflection on how those systems were developing and being understood within those societies and raise issues about the ways in which the two systems interacted and can be usefully compared Some contributions deliberately focus on international issues while others embed the international dimension within them and still others offer a critical commentary on developments during the 1950s The book will appeal primarily to students and researchers in media and communication studies television studies radio studies and history but will also be of interest to all who have an interest in developments in communication in the post war period British Television Advertising Renée Dickason,2000 Since television in the UK began advertisements have come to be acceptable to the viewer and to be considered by some as a bastion of Britishness in a world of increasing media globalization This study examines the question of television advertising as an expression of cultural identity Beyond 3D TV Tony Sperry, The Life and Times of A D Blumlein R. W. Burns,2000 Despite his accidental death in June 1942 at the age of 38 Alan Dower Blumlein was unquestionably one of the century s most creative engineers and filed some 140 patents He was the driving force and inspiration behind a vast number of fundamental innovations in the fields of radar electronics and sound recording amongst which he held perhaps the landmark patent enabling stereo sound Surprisingly until 1999 there had been no biographies of this remarkable man The IEE is proud to rectify this by publication of this scholarly treatment of Blumlein s life which includes a foreword by his eldest son
